Preface

Most parts of Africa are peaceful. For most of its history, peoples and communities have lived in peace and harmony. Kinships, organized into villages, towns, and cities, sustained themselves on the deliberate strategy of building cohesion, resolving conflicts in a peaceful and amicable way, and preventing long-term hostility that can damage the social fabric.

However, the continent also manifests serious contradictions. To start with, the past is full of accounts of wars and violence. The process of building states, kingdoms, and empires required the use of the military. Once created, the states were successful in maintaining peace and political stability over a wider region. Kings and chiefs must protect their citizens to claim legitimacy and relevance.

The most traumatic moment began with the encounters with the outside world. Whether it was trade across the Sahara, the Atlantic, or the Indian Ocean, all involved the traffic in human beings. Slaves were produced by violence—raiding expeditions and wars resulted in war captives who lost their citizenship and were transported to distant lands. African wars in the age of slavery undermined their humanity, care, and concern for one another. With firearms supplied from Europe, they became more bloody and ruthless than ever before.

The ending of the trans-Atlantic slave trade saw the transition to the European colonization of Africa after 1885. Wars of conquest and wars of resistance were many. Modern Africa was a product of violence and wars. To regain its sovereignty, another moment of crisis ensued after World War II. Anti-colonial nationalism led to the violent Mau Mau uprisings in Kenya and the Algerian War of Independence, both in the 1950s; the prolonged wars in all the Portuguese-speaking colonies in the 1960s, 1970s, and 1980s; and the bitter and costly anti-apartheid struggles in South Africa that ended in the 1990s.

As we enter the contemporary period, a number of places became “hot spots” as captured in this book. The themes explored in this book reflect a number of issues:

1. the inability to resolve past historical conflicts (e.g., Sudan);
2. the inability to resolve the management of plural ethnic societies (e.g., civil wars in Nigeria, Niger, Sierra Leone, and Liberia);
3. the inability to manage the crises of racial identity (Darfur, Mauritania);
4. the inability to integrate a dual ethnic society (Rwanda where the Hutu and Tutsi have a weak integrative political order);
5. conditions that promote secessionist movements (Ethiopia and Eritrea, Biafra and Nigeria, Katanga in the Congo, etc.);
6. contested ideologies and nationalism, expressed as ethnic and religious fundamentalism (Sudan, Nigeria, Uganda, Burundi, Ethiopia, Sierra Leone);
7. armed struggles by oppositional forces (insurrections in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Sudan, Uganda);
8. Foreign intervention (removal or assassination of political leaders);
9. the Cold War;
10. resource curse, a situation where abundance of strategic materials such as oil, diamonds, and gold promote instability (Sierra Leone, Angola, Congo); and
11. underdevelopment and struggles over limited resources (e.g., Liberia).

“Hot spots” will not stay “hot” forever. The search for peace is inevitable. The narrative of peace is unavoidable. The narrative of peace has to replace the narrative of war. We would like to offer our humble suggestions to promote peace. Sustainable development represents the starting point. Poverty is one of the key roots of the problem. Those in power manifest an uncontrollable degree of greed that complicates the ability to manage resources to take care of the majority of the population. Those who have tasted power and have seen the rewards and privileges of it want to stay in power. Those who are out of power see the need to get it, not necessarily because they want to serve the public with honesty and dedication but because they want to loot. Violence is justified in pursuit of the dream. Democracy, if it is genuine, can promote peace.

Where there is oil, diamonds, and gold, foreign companies will always set their eyes on them. Without internal mechanisms to protect a country, it will fall prey into the hands of ruthless merchants who form an alliance with corrupt local politicians. The solution to this serious problem is transparency in collecting revenues and accountability in spending them.

Governments at regional and international levels have a responsibility to protect the lives of innocent people, to prevent wars, and to create conditions to promote peace. Regional integration of the continent into powerful blocs and subsequently a continental one will put an end to bloodshed. Responsible governments must be committed to peace at all levels. Corrupt and authoritarian governments provoke conflicts and opposition. Effective democracy, which allows representatives from ethnic and religious groups to participate in decision making, will reduce conflicts.

It remains for us to thank a few people who made this book a reality. Ms. Carrie Lett, editorial assistant at Greenwood, commissioned the project. For Adebayo Oyeade, this is his second book with Greenwood. For Toyin Falola, this is his eighth book. We remain permanently grateful and appreciative of their efforts to promote African scholarship. Greenwood's Culture and Customs of Africa Series, for which Falola acts as its editor, is pretty well established. Next, we have to thank our supportive wives (Bisi and Sade) and children, the pillars of support. In our various universities, valuable friends and colleagues have encouraged and inspired us. Toyin Falola is grateful to the friendship and support of Professor Niyi Afolabi of the Department of Spanish and Portuguese Studies, the University of Texas at Austin. Adebayo Oyeade would like to acknowledge the encouragement of his friends and colleagues: Dr. Moses Ochondu of Vanderbilt University, and Dr. Erik Schmeller, Dr. Sheri Brown, Dr. Gashawbeza Bekele, Dr. Daniel Gibran, and Dr. Michael Bertrand of Tennessee State University.

Timeline of Selected Conflicts

- | | |
|-------|---|
| 1054 | The al-Murabethin (or Almoravid), an Islamic movement of the Sanhaja Berbers, launches a jihad against the ancient empire of Ghana. The invasion leads to the demise of the empire. |
| 1235 | Sundiata Keita, a Mandinka prince, defeats the oppressive ruler of the Sosso Kingdom, Suman-guru Kanté, at the Battle of Kirina. This defeat marks the beginning of the rise of the Mali Empire. |
| 1450s | The European slave trade in Africa across the Atlantic begins. The procurement of slaves in West and Southwest Africa causes intercommunal violence. |
| 1591 | The empire of Songhai is defeated by the better-equipped army of the sultan of Morocco. At the Battle of Tondibi, the noted Western Sudanese center of scholarship and trade, Timbuktu, is captured and looted. |
| 1630s | The woman ruler of Ndongo Kingdom, Nzinga Mbande, leads resistance struggle against Portugal's imperial design. |
| 1650s | Expansion of Dutch and other European settlers in the Cape region of Southern Africa leads to systematic destruction of the Khoisan. |
| 1720s | Islamist revivalist movements in Western Sudan lead to the establishment of the imamates of Futa Jallon, Bondu, and Futa Toro. |

- 1723 In South Africa, the Boers engage the Xhosa in a series of frontier wars.
- 1748 The powerful Yoruba cavalry state of Oyo invades and subdues Dahomey Kingdom.
- 1804–1809 Fulani revolutionary leader, Uthman dan Fodio, leads a jihad in Hausaland against the non-Muslim Hausa rulers. The jihadists triumph at the Battle of Alkalawa in 1808, and an Islamic empire, the Sokoto Caliphate, is created in present-day northern Nigeria.
- 1807 The British Parliament outlaws the Atlantic slave trade. A year later, the United States ends the trade. However, illegal trafficking of slaves across the Atlantic continues.
- 1810 Muslim cleric Seku Ahmadu Lobbo leads an Islamic revolution against the non-Muslim state of Macina. The jihad results in the establishment of a theocratic state in present-day Mali.
- 1820s Southern Africa witnesses disturbances called Mfecane (or difaqane) as a result of a number of factors including Zulu militarism, regional power struggles, and competition over scarce resources.
- 1830–1893 Yorubaland is plagued by intergroup civil wars. The British intervention in the Kiriji/Ekitiparapo War in 1886 brings the conflicts to an end. However, communal tensions continue well into the end of the nineteenth century when the entire region came under British imperial control.
- 1837 Fulani jihadists invade the Yoruba kingdom of Oyo, sacking its capital, Oyo-Ile.
- 1850–1861 An Islamic revolution, the Tijaniyya Jihad, led by al-Hajj Umar against the Bambara states of Segu and Kaarta, leads to the establishment of an Islamic empire striding parts of present-day Mali and Burkina Faso.
- 1861 The piecemeal but violent process of the British occupation of Nigeria commences with the establishment of a consulate in Lagos.
- 1879 The bloody Anglo-Zulu War ends the independence of the Zulu nation. The state is incorporated into the British Empire.
- 1881 The Mahdist revolt in Sudan begins, aimed at liberating Sudan from Turkish, Egyptian, and

- eventually British control. Anglo-Egyptian forces nip the Islamic insurgence in the bud by 1898.
- 1885 The Belgian monarch, King Leopold II, claims the Congo Free State as his personal fiefdom. Repressive rule over the territory begins.
- 1892 France conquers Dahomey and establishes its control over that area of West Africa.
- 1896 The Italian army is defeated by the Ethiopians at the Battle of Adwa (Adowa) in the first Italo-Ethiopian War.
- 1897 In the so-called “Punitive Expedition,” British forces invade Benin, capital of the great empire of Benin. The city is looted and much of its rich art, including its famous bronze work, is destroyed or carted away by the invading forces.
- 1898 Samori ibn Touré’s resistance against the French imperial interest collapses. His Mandinka state in present-day Republic of Guinea becomes a part of the budding French empire in West Africa.
- 1899–1902 The bloody Second Anglo-Boer War brings the Boer republics of Transvaal and the Orange Free State under British control. Earlier effort in the First Anglo-Boer War of 1880–1881 had failed to achieve this.
- 1905–1907 In the Maji Maji Rebellion in Tanganyika (now Tanzania), Africans violently resist colonial German policies.
- 1929 Women of Aba in southeastern Nigeria stage an anti-tax revolt against the colonial government.
- 1935 Fascist Italy invades Ethiopia, the only African nation in the League of Nations, sparking the Second Italo-Ethiopian War, which led to Italian military occupation of Ethiopia for five years.
- 1941 Ethiopia is liberated by British troops, ending Italian occupation.
- 1948–1994 South Africa is ruled by white minority regimes under the virulently racist and oppressive apartheid system. The African population reacts by a long but successful anti-apartheid struggle.
- 1951–1956 A violent uprising in Kenya by the Mau Mau (land and freedom army) forces the British authority to initiate reforms to the colonial system.

- 1955–1972 The first phase of the long and devastating Sudanese Civil War occurs.
- 1960 Anti-apartheid campaign in South Africa in the 1960s becomes more militant. On March 21, South African police murdered 69 unarmed anti-pass laws protesters in the township of Sharpeville. The Sharpeville Massacre is one of the most violent acts perpetrated by the apartheid government against blacks.
- 1960–1965 The first major post-independence conflict in Africa, the Congo Crisis, occurs. The Congolese prime minister, Patrice Lumumba, is murdered. The crisis is escalated by extra-African intervention driven by Cold War ideological consideration.
- 1960–1966 Nigeria's first republic is engulfed in a political crisis, leading to the first military intervention in national politics.
- 1961 In South Africa, the African National Congress (ANC) forms an armed wing, Umkhonto we Sizwe, in June. The force commences armed resistance in December.
- 1961–1974 Bloody war of national liberation occurs in the Portuguese colony of Angola, culminating in independence on November 11, 1975.
- 1961–1991 Eritrean separatists fight a war for independence against the Ethiopian government. Eritrea is granted independence on May 24, 1993.
- 1963–1973 National liberation war against Portuguese colonialism is fought in Guinea-Bissau. Independence is granted on September 10, 1974.
- 1963 The Organization of African Unity (OAU) is established in Addis Ababa, under the chairmanship of Emperor Haile Selassie. A Commission of Mediation, Conciliation, and Arbitration is enshrined within the organization in 1964 to help resolve interstate conflicts.
- 1964 Border skirmishes occur between Somalia and Ethiopia, on one hand, and between Somali and Kenya, on the other hand.
- 1964–1974 Mozambique fights a bloody guerrilla war of national liberation against Portuguese colonialism. Mozambique is granted independence on June 25, 1975.

- 1966 Mass killing of the Igbo occurs in northern Nigeria. The pogroms are directly related to the subsequent outbreak of the Nigerian Civil War.
- 1966–1980 Black Zimbabweans employ armed struggle to end racist white minority rule. Independence under black majority rule is attained on April 18, 1980.
- 1966–1990 Namibia fights a war of national liberation to end apartheid South Africa's control. Independence is achieved on March 21, 1990.
- 1967–1970 A bloody civil war in Nigeria ends the secession of the southeastern part of the country, which had declared itself the Republic of Biafra.
- 1971–1979 President Idi Amin, perhaps the most brutal of all Africa's dictators, rules Uganda with an iron hand. During his reign of terror, several thousand Ugandans are reportedly murdered.
- 1972 Selective genocide occurs in Burundi in which the Hutu intelligentsia is marked for destruction by government forces. The massacre claims about 150,000 lives.
- 1974–1991 The Derg Revolution occurs in Ethiopia, virtually turning the state into a totalitarian one, characterized by bloody repression of opponents of the ruling military elite. During the Red Terror of 1977–1987, the revolution exterminates thousands of dissenters. Ethiopia also experiences civil war between 1974 and 1991.
- 1975–1992 Angola is embroiled in a devastating civil war mainly between the government controlled by the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (Movimento Popular de Libertação de Angola; MPLA) and the rebel National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (União Nacional para a Independência Total de Angola; UNITA).
- 1976 On June 16, the racist police in apartheid South Africa kill over six hundred black secondary school students in Soweto protesting the Bantu Education Act that compelled blacks to receive instruction in Afrikaans. The brutality of the Soweto riots brings the anti-apartheid struggle to international attention.
- 1977–1992 A destructive civil war ravages Mozambique as the rebel Resistência Nacional Moçambicana

- (RENAMO, or as sometimes referred to, the Mozambican National Resistance, MNR), fights the government controlled by the Front for the Liberation of Mozambique (Frente de Libertação de Moçambique; FRELIMO).
- 1977–1978 Somali forces invade the Ogaden region of Ethiopia in the pursuit of its irredentist policy. The Somalis are defeated in the Ogaden War.
- 1978–1979 War occurs between Tanzania and Uganda following incursion into Tanzania by President Idi Amin's army. Tanzania's subsequent invasion of Uganda leads to the overthrow of the brutal Amin regime that has killed about 300,000 people.
- 1980 Several days of Maitatsine rioting, a violent Islamic uprising in Nigeria's northern city of Kano, ends in the deaths of thousands of people.
- 1980s Violence escalates in the black townships of South Africa, causing the government to declare a state of emergency.
- 1983–2005 The Sudanese Civil War continues in a second phase.
- 1986 By the order of President Ronald Reagan, the U.S. Air Force bombs military targets in Libya in order to destroy alleged terrorist centers in the country and reduce the ability of Muammar Gaddafi, the Libyan leader, to sponsor terror acts.
- 1987– Joseph Kony, a self-professed spirit medium, leads an armed group, the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA), in a devastating war in northern Uganda. The ongoing war has spilled into neighboring Sudan, the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), and Central African Republic (CAR).
- 1988 Hutu/Tutsi violence in Burundi continues, claiming thousands of lives on both sides.
- 1989–1996 Civil War in Liberia wrecks its economy, decimates infrastructure, and kills about 150,000 people, representing over 5 percent of its population.
- 1990 The West African intervention force, the ECOWAS Monitoring Group (ECOMOG), is established, originally as a peace-monitoring instrument. Dominated by Nigeria, the force has increasingly taken on combat operations, intervening in the civil wars in Liberia and Sierra Leone.

- 1990s Somalia enters into a persistent period of collapse. A civil war soon ensues, lasting till present. Somalia remains virtually a collapsed state.
- 1990s– A new level of violence commences in the Niger Delta of Nigeria. Local communities aggressively demand from the Nigerian federal government a fair share of their region's riches. They also oppose the environmental destruction of their lands as a result of oil drilling by multinational corporations.
- 1991–2002 Civil war occurs in Sierra Leone as the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) engages the government in a brutal conflict. RUF campaigns are marked by brutal attacks on the civil population, resulting in mass amputations of victims' limbs, the deaths of about 50,000 people, and displacement of over a million people.
- 1992 The United States president, George H. W. Bush, orders American forces into Somalia in a humanitarian intervention operation code named "Operation Restore Hope." In the attempt to capture the Somali warlord, Mohammed Aideed, a unit of American troops is ambushed by Somali militia men, which leads to the shooting down of two American Blackhawk helicopters and the killing of 18 American soldiers.
- 1992–2002 After a lull, the Angolan civil war resumes following the refusal of the rebel leader Jonas Savimbi to accept the result of the 1992 elections, which he lost. The killing of Savimbi in combat by government forces on February 22, 2002, finally brings the war to an end.
- 1993 Interethnic killings break out in Burundi after the assassination of President Melchoir Ndadaye. About 50,000 are killed.
- 1994 A month-long genocide in Rwanda results in the massacre of about 800,000 ethnic Tutsi and moderate Hutus by Hutu extremists.
- 1996–1997 Warlord Laurent Kabila leads an uprising against President Mobutu in Zaire. Mobutu is overthrown, and Kabila assumes power and changes the name of the country to the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). Kabila himself is assassinated in 2002. The DRC has since been immersed in a brutal civil war in which a lot of atrocities have been committed, including mass rape of women.

- 1997 May 25, Sierra Leone's president, Tejan Kabbah, is overthrown in a coup d'état. A new military junta, the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), allies itself with the rebel RUF. Nigeria's navy subsequently bombards Freetown in an attempt to dislodge the rebels from the city. ECOWAS approves the use of force to restore deposed President Kabbah.
- 1998 President Kabbah is restored to power in March following military action against the AFRC by the Nigerian-led ECOMOG intervention force.
- 1998 In August, terrorists linked to Osama bin Laden's al-Qaeda simultaneously bomb the American embassies in Dar-es-Salam, Tanzania, and Nairobi, Kenya, killing over two hundred Africans and a dozen Americans in both attacks.
- 1998–2000 A devastating border war between Eritrea and Ethiopia destroys a hitherto cordial relationship between the two states.
- 1998–2003 The civil war in Liberia is renewed as opposition rebel groups battle the government in an attempt to overthrow President Charles Taylor.
- 1999 In "Operation No Living Things," deadly and devastating attacks are launched in January by RUF. In the attacks, the rebels killed thousands of people in Freetown.
- 1999–2000 Several states in northern Nigeria adopt the Islamic legal code, the Sharia'a. As a result of this development, religious tension prevalent in the country is heightened. Since then, numerous violent clashes between Christians and Muslims mostly orchestrated by Muslim fundamentalists have caused the deaths of thousands of people in many parts of the country.
- 2002–2007 Full-scale civil war occurs in Côte d'Ivoire, which began with mutiny in the army.
- 2003 War erupts in the Darfur region of Sudan.
- 2003 The United States establishes a military base in Djibouti to coordinate its counterterrorist operations in the Horn of Africa.
