Criminal Law in the USA

The Author

D. Scott Broyles is an Assistant Professor at the Charlotte School of Law. Professor Broyles is an accomplished political science expert and terrorism and organized crime litigator.

Prior to joining CSL, Professor Broyles served as an Assistant United States Attorney (AUSA) for the Western District of North Carolina, originally specializing in Organized Crime and Drugs. He later moved into the White Collar Crime division where he was an Assistant Appellate Chief, Anti-Terrorism Coordinator and International Coordinator leading anti-terrorism and international cases. During his tenure with the federal government, Professor Broyles received high honors as an outstanding litigator. He earned the OCDETF Case of the Year Award in 2000 and the John Marshall Award for Outstanding Legal Achievement for Trial of Litigation in 2003 for successfully prosecuting the first case under the Material Support of a Terrorist Organization Statute (US v. Hammond).

Before serving as an AUSA, Professor Broyles practiced with the law firm Nixon, Yow, Waller & Capers in Augusta, Georgia, specializing in the areas of general litigation, labor law and insurance defense.

In addition to earning a J.D. degree at Washington and Lee University, Professor Broyles also holds a Ph.D. degree from the Institute of Philosophic Studies at the University of Dallas. Professor Broyles has been an adjunct professor in Political Science and American Studies at Queens University. Early in his career he taught in the Political Philosophy Department of the University of Dallas.
