Standards of Admission

The foremost consideration in determining who will be admitted to the pages of Who's Who in America is the extent of an individual's reference interest. Reference value is based on either of two factors: 1) the position of responsibility held or 2) the level of significant achievement attained in a career of noteworthy activity. The majority of biographees qualify for admission on the basis of the first factor, a specific position of responsibility. Incumbency in the position makes the person someone of high reference interest. The factor of position includes the following categories:

1. High-ranking members of the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of the United State government. This group includes, for example, members of Congress, cabinet secretaries, chief administrators of selected federal agencies and commissions, and justices of the federal courts.
2. Military officers on active duty with the rank of major general or higher in the army, air force, and marine corps, and of rear admiral or higher in the navy.
3. Specified state government officials. Among them are governors, lieutenant governors, secretaries of state, attorneys general, treasurers, and other selected positions such as president of the state senate, the state university system administrator, and the chief state health officer. This standard includes officials of American territories.
4. Judges of state and territorial courts of the highest appellate jurisdiction.
5. High-level officials of principal cities, based on population. These officials include mayors, police chiefs, school superintendents, and other selected positions.
6. Leading government officials of Canada and Mexico. In Canada, this group includes, as examples, the prime minister, premiers of the provinces, ministers of departments of the federal government, and justices of the highest courts. Examples in the Mexican government are the president and cabinet secretaries of the national government.
7. Principal officers of major national and international businesses as defined by several quantitative criteria.
8. Ranking administrative officials of major universities and colleges. Some of the officers included in this category are president, provost, dean, and selected department heads.
9. Heads of leading philanthropic, cultural, educational, professional, and scientific institutions and associations. These institutions include, for example, selected foundations, museums, symphony orchestras, libraries, and research laboratories.

10. Selected members of honorary organizations such as the National Academy of Sciences, the National Academy of Design, and the Institute of Medicine. This group includes elected fellows of specified organizations, for example, the Royal Society of Canada and the American College of Trial Lawyers.
11. Chief ecclesiastics of the principal religious denominations.
12. Recipients of major national and international awards. A few examples are the Nobel and Pulitzer prizes, the Academy Award, and the American Institute of Architecture Gold Medal for Architecture.

Admission by the second factor—significant achievement—is based on the application of objective criteria established for each field. An artist whose works hang in major museums qualifies for admission for noteworthy accomplishment. The professor who has made important research contributions in his field is of reference interest because of his outstanding achievements. Qualitative standards determine eligibility for every field.

In many instances there is considerable overlap between the two factors used for inclusion in Who's Who in America. For example, the head of a major library is in the book because of position, but reaching that responsibility also signifies important achievement. Similarly, a state governor not only holds a position that warrants inclusion; attaining that post also represents significant achievement in the political world. In both cases the reference value of the biographical sketch is significant. Whether the person has been selected because of position or as a mark of achievement, the biographee in Who's Who in America has noteworthy accomplishments beyond those of the vast majority of contemporaries.

Alphabetical Practices

Names are arranged alphabetically according to the surnames, and under identical surnames according to the first given name. If both surname and first given name are identical, names are arranged alphabetically according to the second given name. Where full names are identical, they are arranged in order of age—with the elder listed first.

Surnames beginning with De, Des, Du, however capitalized or spaced, are recorded with the prefix preceding the surname and arranged alphabetically under the letter D.

Surnames beginning with Mac and Mc are arranged alphabetically under M.

Surnames beginning with Saint or St. appear after names that begin Sains, and are arranged according to the second part of the name, e.g. St. Clair before Saint Dennis.

Surnames beginning with Van, Von or von are arranged alphabetically under letter V.

Compound hyphenated surnames are arranged according to the first member of the compound. Compound unhyphenated surnames are treated as hyphenated names.

Parentheses used in connection with a name indicate which part of the full name is usually deleted in common usage. Hence Abbott, W(illiam) Lewis indicates that the usual form of the given name is W. Lewis. In such a case, the parentheses are ignored in alphabetizing. However, if the name is recorded Abbott, (William) Lewis, signifying that the entire name William is not commonly used, the alphabetizing would be arranged as though the name were Abbott, Lewis.

The two parties cannot exist without each other. A fairly paid worker requires a financially successful employer. An employer cannot become financially successful without satisfied workers. This concept has been of great help in my dealings with labor and management over the years.*

Achievers from the 'make things happen' school of thought who attribute their success to their own doing may do well to contemplate where they would be without luck.*

Contrb. to World Book Yearbook, 1961-75, Grolier Soc. Yearbook, 1962, Home and Office: 5750 Kenwood Ave Chicago IL 60637 The art of cooking rests upon one's ability to taste, to reproduce taste, and to create taste. To achieve distinction the cook must taste everything, study cookbooks of all kinds, and experiment constantly in the kitchen. I stress in my writing and teaching the logic of food preparation, for the cook who possesses logic, knows how to create dishes rather than being content merely to duplicate the recipes of others.
