Acknowledgements

In compiling this handbook, we placed heavy reliance on our contributors and we are very grateful to them for participating in this project.

We also had a great deal of help from Darragh O'Neill, who organized the entries and maintained our spreadsheet to keep track of them all. Nothing was ever too much trouble and we are indebted to him for his patience and organizing ability in complying with our many requests for status updates. Darren Hollet assisted in tracking down emails and affiliation details of our contributors, whilst lovely CJ and Stu helped at the copy-editing stage.

Andy Peart was our first editor at Cambridge University Press and shared our initial ambition and enthusiasm for the project; he was ably followed by Carrie Parkinson and Liz Davey, who helped with the book to completion.

We hope readers will find this book to be a reference source which is both enjoyable to read and informative.
