ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Three institutions deserve particular thanks. The Hague Academy of International Law asked me to give a series of lectures on foreign currency obligations in the summer of 2003 and subsequently published them in the Recueil des cours. I give special thanks to Peter Trooboff for his part in initiating that invitation and to the Academy for permission to build on those 2003 lectures in writing this book. The Foundation for Legal Research awarded me a grant to hire a research assistant. The staff of the Sir James Dunn Law Library at Dalhousie University were unfailingly competent and pleasant in responding to my many requests for assistance. I especially thank research librarians David Michels, Mark Lewis and Jennifer Adams.

Several people provided help along the way, in particular Barry Glaspell, Archie Kaiser, Mohammed Khimji, Scott Millar, Richard Frimpong Oppong, Angela Swan and Jacob Ziegel. Finally, thanks to everyone at Hart, especially Mel Hamill and Rachel Turner, for their co-operation, competence and patience.
