

Ethics at Work

Jerry Cederblom
Charles J. Dougherty

THOMSON LEARNING

TM

CUSTOM PUBLISHING

Ethics at Work

Jerry Cederblom

University of Nebraska at Omaha

Charles J. Dougherty

Creighton University

WADSWORTH

THOMSON LEARNING

COPYRIGHT © 2001 by Wadsworth Group. Wadsworth is an imprint of the Wadsworth Group, a division of Thomson Learning Inc. Thomson Learning™ is a trademark used herein under license.

Printed in the United States of America

Wadsworth/Thomson Learning
10 Davis Drive
Belmont, CA 94002-3098
USA

For information about our products, contact us:
Thomson Learning Academic Resource Center
1-800-423-0563
<http://www.wadsworthl.com>

International Headquarters
Thomson Learning
International Division
290 Harbor Drive, 2nd Floor
Stamford, CT 06902-7477
USA

UK/Europe/Middle East/South Africa
Thomson Learning
Berkshire House
168-173 High Holborn
London WC1V 7AA

Asia
Thomson Learning
60 Albert Street, #15-01
Albert Complex
Singapore 189969

Canada
Nelson Thomson Learning
1120 Birchmount Road
Toronto, Ontario M1K 5G4
Canada
United Kingdom

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. No part of this work covered by the copyright hereon may be reproduced or used in any form or by any means—graphic, electronic, or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, taping, Web distribution, or information storage and retrieval systems—without the written permission of the publisher.

ISBN 0-534-72066-8

The Adaptable Courseware Program consists of products and additions to existing Wadsworth Group products that are produced from camera-ready copy. Peer review, class testing, and accuracy are primarily the responsibility of the author(s).

Preface

Ethics at Work is designed specifically for the classroom. It can be used profitably in courses in business ethics, in general or applied ethics courses, and in courses on business and society. We intended it to be intellectually challenging, yet straightforward and free of jargon. We sought to achieve a high level of theoretical sophistication but grounded our discussions in case studies. We tried to write an honest book, one that acknowledges both the importance and limitations of applying ethical theories in the workplace. We hope we have written a book that will promote serious reflection about ethical challenges in the contemporary world of work.

Three guiding convictions were central as we set about writing Ethics at Work. First, we believe that ethical problems arising at work are a distinctive set of problems that challenge individual women and men to make difficult personal choices. Secondly, there are persuasive, competing theoretical perspectives on these problems. Understanding some of the most important of these perspectives is important for making and justifying personal ethical decisions at work. Finally, we hold that understanding an ethical theory requires development of the ability to apply the theory to particular cases.

The literature on business ethics is young and still evolving. We see two errors in much of it and have taken great care to avoid them in this text. First, many writers on the subject begin with the assumption that the principal problem of business ethics is capitalism. On this account, the commercial, profit-driven, private sector of our economy is the source of most of our ethical conflicts at work. The second error follows: If the problem is the economic system, the ethical analysis must be systemic as well. The central role of the individual woman and man at work is therefore deemphasized.

In our view, the essential problems of business ethics arise because we are at work, because we assume special roles in our jobs, and because many of the things expected of us in these roles differ widely from what is expected at home or with friends. No doubt, the particular character of our economic system causes some ethical conflicts and it surely affects the expression of many others. Nevertheless, we are convinced that the structure of work itself is responsible for a host of ethical problems that affect not only the private, for-profit sector but government and the nonprofit sector as well. In the text, we draw cases and examples of ethical problems from all three workplaces.

As a consequence, we treat ethical problems at work as problems of people, not of systems. Systems can set the horizon for choice, but individuals at work must make their own ethical choices. Sometimes these choices concern particulars, sometimes they concern policies, but in the final analysis they are choices of men and women at work. We assumed throughout that people at work need and want direction in making and justifying difficult ethical choices.

Providing that direction involves an appeal to ethical theories. Theories are ways of looking at particulars. They help to organize, prioritize, and justify. They give us perspective and lead us toward choice. Rarely do they dictate a single choice, however. Ethical theories help in probing ethical problems but do not resolve them. So it is with Ethics at Work—theories are used as tools for analysis, but most conclusions are left to the reader.

The task of bringing ethics to work is made more complex by the fact that there are differing ethical theories that offer comprehensive and competing perspectives. We could have chosen one such theory and used it throughout the book. That would have been simpler, but it would have misrepresented an important reality: theoretical disagreement among thinkers in ethics. We chose to capture part of this reality by using two of the most compelling contemporary theories and developing two different versions of each. Thus on most issues in the text, we take the reader through four ethical perspectives shaped by the theories we use.

The basic insights of the two theories are straightforward. The first, utilitarianism, holds that we are obliged to maximize happiness by our choices. When we apply that insight case-by-case, the resulting perspective is act utilitarianism. When we apply it to rules that govern cases, the result is rule utilitarianism. The alternative theory, contractarianism, holds that we must be fair by upholding the social contracts we have with others. When the stress is on agreements actually made with others, we call the resulting perspective a less restrictive contractarianism. When we appeal to keeping hypothetical agreements that we would have made if we were free of bias, we call the resulting view a more restrictive contractarianism.

Throughout Ethics at Work we ask if a given choice produces happiness in this case and as a rule and if it is fair in light of actual and hypothetical social contracts. Thus, the text is also a study of ethical theories at work. At several key points, we invite the reader to appraise the effectiveness of each perspective in helping to deal with ethical problems at work.

Organization and Use of the Text

The chapters of the text follow an appropriate sequence for a course in ethics. The first two chapters are introductory. Chapter One sets the problem of deciding what is the right thing to do in the particular context of work, and Chapter Two discusses whether there are any easy ways out of this problem. The next three chapters are theoretical, laying out the utilitarian and contract approaches as ways of deciding both what acts we should perform and what character traits we should cultivate. Chapters Six through Twelve apply these theories to cases. They contain twenty-eight detailed case studies in which all four ethical perspectives are used. Chapter Thirteen concludes the text by investigating which of the four approaches, if applied, would probably yield the most rewarding career. This chapter also addresses the question of whether it could be more rewarding still to take an unethical approach to one's career.

Fifty exercise sets, which are integrated into the text, challenge readers to develop their understanding of the theories and problems at hand by extending discussions from the text into related areas. Many of the exercises require considerable time and thought. Some of these might be best carried out in groups or in class discussion, so that the ideas and background knowledge of many individuals can be brought to bear on particular problems. Additionally, Appendix One contains innovative exercises designed specifically for groups. We provide enough exercises that instructors may select those most suitable for their classes rather than assign all of them.

Acknowledgments

Our development of cases and exercises that reflect the practical demands of work was assisted by perspectives we received from others. We conducted numerous interviews with women and men in varied lines of work. We interviewed a small-business entrepreneur, a policeman, an architect, a director of a nonprofit community agency, a department head of an insurance company, a systems communication coordinator, and an executive secretary, to give a few examples. We asked each of our interviewees questions such as: What do you do in your job and what is your work organization like? What ethical problems do you encounter at work? Which are the most serious and the most common? Which involve the public or others outside the organization? Have you ever—or ever considered—blowing the whistle on some unethical practice at work? When you know what's right, what factors at work make it hard to do what's right?

Our interviewees were exceptionally candid. Their experiences are reflected in the pages of this book. We are most grateful to them.

We are also grateful to our families and our universities for supporting us in this effort. Among those who were particularly helpful in arranging interviews or in providing technical information concerning specific occupations are John Kerrigan, Doug Cederblom, and Derrel Cederblom. The students in the University of Nebraska-Omaha class in business ethics of fall 1988 helped us sharpen the classroom effectiveness of Ethics at Work. We are also indebted to Nanci J. Borg and to Creighton University's Center for Health Policy and Ethics for assistance in preparing the text.

Special thanks are due to our editor, Kenneth King, for his encouragement and advice throughout the project, and to Angela Mann and the Wadsworth staff for shaping the manuscript into book form. We would like to thank the reviewers for their many suggestions. They are Carol Campbell, University of Charleston/The River School; Vivien Schmidt, University of Massachusetts, Boston; John C. Modschiedler, College of Du Page; Frank Fair, Sam Houston State University; and Robert M. Johnson, Castleton State College.

Finally, we are grateful for the opportunity to work together on this project. If every working experience were so happy and fair, there would be far fewer ethical problems at work.

Contents

Table of Cases	xiii
Preface	xv

Chapter 1 The Special Problem of Doing Right in Our Occupations 1

Breaking the Normal Rules	2
The Difficulty of Solving Ethical Problems Without the Normal Rules	4
The Haste to Address Questions of Enforcement	5
Recent Attention to Workplace Ethics	7
How We Will Proceed	10

Chapter 2 Are There Any Easy Ways Out? 13

If It's Legal, Does That Make It Moral?	14
Legality and Morality Differ	14
Is It Reasonable to Require More Than the Law Requires?	14
Problems with the Premises	16
Would the Argument Provide an Easy Way Out?	18
If Something Is in Your Interest, Does That Make It Right?	20
The Solution of the Company Loyalist	24

Chapter 3 *The Utilitarian Approach:
Benevolence* 31

Two General Approaches to Ethical Problems 33

Preliminary Contrast of Utilitarianism and Contractarianism 33

An Analysis of Costs and Benefits 37

Balancing the Ethical Ledger 40

Act versus Rule Utilitarianism 42

Utility and Unselfishness at Work 46

The Underlying Rationale of Utilitarianism 49

Chapter 4 The Contract Approach: Fairness 51

Traditional Contract Theory 52

John Rawls's Ideal Contractarianism 52

Right Action for Individuals 56

Natural Duties 57

Obligations 58

The Theory at Work 59

Two Versions of the Theory 60

The Main Differences Between Contract and Utilitarian Approaches 62

Actions That Go Beyond Your Duty 64

Chapter 5 Character at Work 67

Character Strengths Required by Both Theories 68

Utilitarian Strengths of Character 70

Contractarian Strengths of Character 71

Possible Utilitarian Character Flaws 73

Possible Contractarian Character Flaws 75

Summary of Possible Character Flaws 77

Personal Ethical Traits at Work 79

Why Be Ethical at Work?	81
How to Be Ethical at Work	83

Chapter 6 On the Inside: Your Obligations and Interests at Work 87

How Hard Should You Work?	88
The Utilitarian Approach	89
The Contract Approach	90
The Theories Compared	91
Credit Where Credit Is Due	93
The Indirect Utility of Credit	94
Will Contract Theory Give You More Credit?	95
Status and Respect for Persons at Work	97
Status Differences Depend on Results	98
Contractarianism and Equal Respect for Persons	99
"Sharing" Property and Money	102
Contractarianism and Property	103
The Utility of Property	103
Controlling Information	106
Must Utilitarians Tell the Truth?	107
Contractarianism and Lying	108
Back to the Special Problem of Doing Right at Work	110

Chapter 7 At Work, in Society 113

Deceptive Promotion	114
Effects of a Policy of Deception	114
The Utility of Particular Options	115
The Contract Approach: Honest Representation	116
Conflicting Obligations?	117
Questionable Defenses	119
Contract and Law	120
Applying the Contract	121

Weighing the Consequences	123
Whistleblowing	125
Some Consequences of Racism	126
The General Effects of Whistleblowing	128
Race and the Social Contract	129
Promoting the Public Interest	132
What's in a Job?	133
Conflicting Contracts	134
Implications for Happiness	135
Chapter 8
Corporate Interests,
Public Interests	139
Corporate Policy on Charitable Donations	140
Utilitarian Giving	141
Education and Rule Utility	142
Contractarian Giving	143
Giving Behind the Veil	144
Fairness in Hiring	146
Contracts and Jobs	147
Procedural and Substantive Fairness	148
Consequences of Affirmative Action	149
Considering Bids and Awarding Contracts	151
The Complexity of Awarding Contracts	152
Utilitarian Perspectives	152
Some Effects of Bribery	153
Bids and Contracts	154
Plant Closing	156
The Social Contract and Your Community	157
Relocating Behind the Veil	159
The Utility of Relocating	159

Chapter 9 The Organization's Obligations to Its Members 163

Allocation of Pay 163

Utilitarianism and Profits 164

Some Effects of Different Allocations 166

Contractarian Allocation of Profits 168

Allocating from the Original Position 169

A Just System of Promotion 171

Utilitarianism and Preferential Promotion 172

Some Effects of Promotion Policies 173

Contract Theory and Preferential Promotion 174

Promotion from the Original Position 175

Whom to Fire? 177

Choosing Whom to Fire 178

Fairness and Firing 179

Taking Stock: Some General Remarks on the Theories 181

Chapter 10 Ethical Codes at Work 187

Peer Meetings 188

Ethical Codes for Organizations 190

Choosing Committee Members 192

Content of the Rules 192

Enforcing an Organizational Code 195

Enforcement: Good Results or Fairness? 196

Penalize Enough to Discourage Others 196

Inflict Penalties When Deserved 197

Organizational Codes versus Occupational Codes 199

Revising a Professional Code 200

Two Contrasting Approaches 201

Assessing an Actual Code 201

Utilitarian Changes 205

Contractarian Changes 205

Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice of the National Association of Realtors® 207

Chapter 11 Government at Work 219

Tax Incentives 220

Are Tax Incentives Useful? 221

Contracts and Tax Incentives 223

Rules and Regulations 226

The Contract Approach to Regulation 227

Transportation from the Original Position 228

The Consequences of Regulation 229

Unconscionable Contracts 231

Would Contractarians Allow Organ Sales? 232

Would Utilitarians Sell Organs? 235

White-Collar Crime and Punishment 238

Policy, Utility, and Crime 239

The Effects of a White-Collar Crime 240

Crime and the Social Contract 241

Crime Behind the Veil 243

Chapter 12 Bringing Work Home 245

Career Choices 245

Which Career Would a Utilitarian Choose? 247

Considering General Effects 249

The Contract Approach and a Particular Career 250

Couples, Careers, Children 252

Contractarian Couples 252

Utilitarian Couples 255

Innovative Work Arrangements 257

Weighing the Utility of Innovation 258

Job Sharing as a Rule 261

Job Sharing and Contracts 262

Sharing Jobs Behind the Veil 264

Moving the Family	266
Contracts and Relocation	266
Relocating as a Rule	269
Judging the Effects of a Move	270

Chapter 13 The Rewards of an Ethical Career 273

The Rewards of Work	274
Extrinsic Rewards	274
Intrinsic Rewards	275
Social Rewards	276
Moral Satisfaction	276
Rewards for the Act Utilitarian	278
A Favorable Outcome	280
An Average Outcome	280
An Unfavorable Outcome	280
Rewards for the Less Restrictive Contractarian	281
A "Natural" Scenario	282
A Better Scenario	282
How the Less Restrictive Contractarian Might Fall	283
Rewards for the Rule Utilitarian	283
The Best Outcome	285
A Worse Outcome	285
An Average Outcome	286
Rewards for the More Restrictive Contractarian	286
A Negative Scenario	288
A Neutral Scenario	288
The Best Scenario	289
Is It More Rewarding to Be Unethical?	290
The Unethical Person's Best Situation	291
A Middle Situation	292
A Less Favorable Situation	292
The Myth of Sisyphus	293

Appendix 1 Small-Group Activities for the Classroom 297

Appendix 2 Selected Codes of Ethics 303

Index 323

Table of Cases

Case 6.1	Unequal Work for Equal Shares	89
Case 6.2	Your Plan Becomes "The Department's" Plan	93
Case 6.3	Should an Organization's Members Be Addressed as Equals?	98
Case 6.4	A Personal Call at the Company's Expense	102
Case 6.5	Whether to Write an Honest Evaluation	106
Case 7.1	Whether to Misrepresent Your Organization	114
Case 7.2	Defending Your Company	119
Case 7.3	Blowing the Whistle	126
Case 7.4	Criticizing Company Policies	133
Case 8.1	Giving at the Office	140
Case 8.2	Whether to Institute a Minority Hiring Program	146
Case 8.3	The Coffee Contract	151
Case 8.4	Whether to Move the Plant	156
Case 9.1	Higher Shares for Partners versus Bigger Bonuses for Employees	164
Case 9.2	Different Promotion Criteria for Racial Minorities	171
Case 9.3	Reduction in Force	178
Case 10.1	Whether to Participate in Peer Meetings on Ethical Problems for Health Inspectors	188
Case 10.2	Chairing a Committee to Revise the Company Handbook	191
Case 10.3	Penalizing Policy Violations	195

Case 10.4	Revising the Code of Ethics for the National Association of Realtors®	200
Case 11.1	Tax Incentives to Rebuild the Inner City	220
Case 11.2	Airline Regulation	226
Case 11.3	Compensation for Organ Donation	231
Case 11.4	Prosecuting Bank Fraud	238
Case 12.1	A Career in Management or in Social Work?	246
Case 12.2	Tough Choices for the Two-Career Couple	252
Case 12.3	A Plan for Job Sharing	258
Case 12.4	Whether to Accept a Business Transfer	266