PREFACE

This book is the result of a three-year research project, which was financially supported by the Fritz-Thyssen Foundation, Germany. It is connected to my previous study Towards an International Criminal Procedure, which was published in 2001. The speed at which international criminal procedure develops has increased at such a rate that it seems impossible for one person alone to cover the entire procedural process. Alongside this current extensive study on international criminal procedure, several individual research projects were undertaken focusing on specific aspects of the ICC procedure by Dr Hilde Farthofer (evidence), Alena Hartwig (pre-trial detention), and Lars Büngener (disclosure of evidence). Also part of the team was Yvonne Koberg, whose special expertise on the SCSL and English criminal law was of immense value. Their contributions to this book are identified throughout; the rest of the unattributed content is mine. Nadine Peter (STL, Timor Leste), and Florian Hansen (ECCC) added their knowledge to this book. Finally, Patrick Donath was part of the team and contributed considerably to the research necessary for this book. In regular meetings, ideas on criminal procedure and international law were developed and discussed, so this is very much a cooperative work.

I am immensely grateful to Sascha Hörmann, Sebastian Kluckow, Franziska Kowalski, and Martin Luber for helping in organizing the content, and pulling together the bibliography and the table of cases. Thanks also to my assistant Daniela Ziegler, who managed to keep other obligations at bay, thus giving me the time necessary to write this book. I am also indebted to the law firm, Salleck & Partner in Erlangen, Germany, for letting me have a quiet room away from the daily grind at the University. Many thanks also to John Louth and Anthony Hilton at Oxford University Press, who believed in this project and swallowed several delays in the submission of the manuscript.

Finally, I need to thank my family who have endured a husband and father who—in particular towards the end of the drafting process—was too often absent both physically and mentally.
