More praise for RISING SUN

"Every so often, a work of popular fiction vaults over its humble origins as entertainment, grasps the American imagination and stirs up the volcanic subtexts of our daily life. Uncle Tom's Cabin was that kind of book; so was Laura Z. Hobson's Gentleman's Agreement. Michael Crichton's eighth novel, RISING SUN, a thriller set against the background of current American-Japanese tensions, is likely to be another. . . . A shocking and ominous polemic, RISING SUN is at heart a rallying cry. . . . That Mr. Crichton effortlessly weaves a mesmerizing mystery comes as no surprise. Witty and erudite, he can already lay claim to one of America's heavyweight titles: Most Serious Suspense Novelist. That he should now write so passionately and engagingly on matters of Japanese culture and the survival of a free and productive America—that is the surprise of RISING SUN. . . . RISING SUN exposes the raw nerves of a country in profound economic distress, of a people with declining faith in themselves, their leaders and their past, a people very uneasy about their future. Despite the book's provocative tone, Mr. Crichton is no xenophobe, no fool, no ranting bigot. The questions he poses are of great consequence in the debate about America's condition at the end of the American century. What more could one ask of popular fiction?"

“EXTRAORDINARY . . .

Where Crichton really excels [is] the detailing of the many ways in which Japan has penetrated America, and the very real dangers this poses. The Japanese make no bones that to them business is war, and that a part of the war is conducted by neutralizing public opinion.”

Chicago Sun-Times

“Remarkably timely . . . The plot of RISING SUN thicken[s] at a satisfying pace. . . . Let us hope that Mr. Crichton's assiduously researched fantasy does not turn out to be too extremely timely.”

The New York Times

“[A] tense, fast-paced murder mystery.”

Playboy

“FASCINATING . . .

Suspenseful . . . Technologically riveting . . . Bound to attract controversy and a huge readership.”

The Kirkus Reviews (starred review)

“Enough mystery and suspense to keep the reader hooked . . . [The] glimpses into the deep-rooted otherness of Japanese mores are fascinating. So is the book’s science, as one might expect from an author with an M.D. degree and a long line of bestsellers with high-tech plots.”

USA Today

“[This] entertaining, well-researched thriller cannot be easily dismissed as Japan-bashing because it raises important questions about that country’s adversarial trade strategy and our inadequate response to it.”

THE ANDROMEDA STRAIN

Five prominent biophysicists warn the U.S. government that sterilization procedures for returning space probes may be inadequate. Two years later, a probe satellite returning from the fringes of space falls to the earth, landing in a desolate area of Arizona. The terror has begun.

CONGO

Deep in the heart of the Congo, near the legendary ruins of the Lost City of Zinj, an entire field expedition dies mysteriously and brutally in a matter of minutes. Ten thousand miles away, in Houston, a gruesome video transmission of the ill-fated team includes the grainy, moving image of a dark, blurred shape. In San Francisco, an extraordinary gorilla with a fondness for finger painting has drawn a map of the ancient lost city. Immediately, a new expedition is sent to the Congo where the only way out may be through the grisliest death. . . .

EATERS OF THE DEAD

The Manuscript of Ibn Fadlan,

Relating His Experiences with the Northmen in A.D. 922

Ibn Fadlan, representative of the ruler of Bagdad, City of Peace, meets up with Buliwyf, a powerful Viking chieftain, who must return to the North to save his people from the monsters of the mist. Join them on their stunning adventure to the land where night is longer than day and where they must lock in mortal combat with brutes who threaten to empty the land.

JURASSIC PARK

An astonishing technique for recovering and cloning dinosaur DNA has been discovered. Now, one of humankind's most thrilling fantasies has come true. Creatures extinct for eons now roam Jurassic Park with their awesome presence and profound mystery, and all the world can visit them—for a price.

Until something goes wrong . . .

SPHERE

A huge vessel is discovered in the middle of the South Pacific a thousand feet below the surface. Descending into the depths, a group of American scientists are dumbfounded at what they find—a spaceship of phenomenal dimensions that seems to be at least three hundred years old.

MICHAEL CRICHTON

THE TERMINAL MAN

Harry Benson suffers from violent seizures, and Dr. McPherson, head of the prestigious Neuro-psychiatric Research Unit, thinks Benson is the perfect candidate for a “stage three.” During this highly specialized surgery, electrodes, placed deep in Benson’s brain, send monitored soothing pulses to its pleasure canyons. The operation is a success until the patient escapes from the hospital transformed into a homicidal maniac with a deadly agenda. . . .

TRAVELS

Fueled by a powerful curiosity, Michael Crichton’s travels have carried him into worlds diverse and compelling. Off Tahiti, he swam through a school of sharks and, in Africa, he came eye to eye with an elephant. This is a record of those travels—an adventure of risk and rejuvenation, terror and wonder.
