

VOLUME II

HISTORY OF LINGUISTICS

CLASSICAL AND MEDIEVAL LINGUISTICS

Edited by GIULIO LEPSCHY

LONGMAN • LINGUISTICS • LIBRARY

History of Linguistics

Volume II: Classical and Medieval Linguistics

edited by Giulio Lepschy

LONGMAN

LONDON AND NEW YORK

Longman Group UK Limited
Longman House, Burnt Mill,
Harlow, Essex CM20 2JE, England and Associated Companies throughout the world

*Published in the United States of America
by Longman Publishing, New York*

Copyright © by Società editrice il Mulino, 1990
English translation © Longman Group UK Limited 1994

All rights reserved; no part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise without either the prior written permission of the Publishers or a licence permitting restricted copying in the United Kingdom issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency Ltd, 90 Tottenham Court Road, London W1P 9HE.

English translation first published 1994
Chapter 2 translated by Emma Sansone

ISBN 0-582-09490-9 CSD
ISBN 0-582-09491-7 PPR

British Library Cataloguing-in-Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Storia della linguistica. English.
History of linguistics / edited by Giulio Lepschy.
p. cm.
Includes bibliographical references and index.
Contents: v. 1. The eastern traditions and linguistics—v.
2. Classical and medieval linguistics.
1. Linguistics—History. I. Lepschy, Giulio C. II. Title.
P61.S513 1994
410'.9—dc20

93-31169
CIP

Set by 15M in 10/11 pt Times
Produced by Longman Singapore Publishers (Pte) Ltd.
Printed in Singapore

LONGMAN LINGUISTICS LIBRARY

HISTORY OF LINGUISTICS VOLUME II

LONGMAN LINGUISTICS LIBRARY

General editors

R. H. Robins University of London
Martin Harris University of Manchester

Geoffrey Horrocks University of Cambridge

A Short History of Linguistics

Third Edition
R. H. ROBINS

Text and Context

Explorations in the Semantics and Pragmatics of Discourse
TEUN A. VAN DIJK

Introduction to Text Linguistics

ROBERT-ALAIN DE BEAUGRANDE
AND WOLFGANG ULRICH
DRESSLER

Psycholinguistics

Language, Mind, and World
DANNY D. STEINBERG

Principles of Pragmatics

GEOFFREY N. LEECH

Generative Grammar

GEOFFREY HORROCKS

The English Verb

Second Edition
F. R. PALMER

A History of American English

J. L. DILLARD

English Historical Syntax

Verbal Constructions
DAVID DENISON

Pidgin and Creole Languages

SUZANNE ROMAINE

General Linguistics

An Introductory Survey
Fourth Edition
R. H. ROBINS

A History of English Phonology

CHARLES JONES

Generative and Non-linear Phonology

JACQUES DURAND

Historical Linguistics

Problems and Perspectives
EDITED BY C. JONES

Modality and the English Modals

Second Edition
F. R. PALMER

Semiotics and Linguistics

YISHAI TOBIN

Multilingualism in the British Isles I: the Older Mother Tongues and Europe

EDITED BY SAFDER ALLADINA
AND VIV EDWARDS

Multilingualism in the British Isles II: Africa, Asia and the Middle East

EDITED BY SAFDER ALLADINA
AND VIV EDWARDS

Dialects of English

Studies in Grammatical Variation
EDITED BY PETER TRUDGILL AND
J. K. CHAMBERS

Introduction to Bilingualism

CHARLOTTE HOFFMANN

Verb and Noun Number in English

A Functional Explanation
WALLIS REID

English in Africa

JOSEF S. SCHMEID

Linguistic Theory

Discourse of Fundamental Works
ROBERT DE BEAUGRANDE

Aspect in the English Verb

Process and Result in Language
YISHAI TOBIN

The Meaning of Syntax:

A Study in the Adjectives of English
CONNOR FERRIS

History of Linguistics

Volume I: The Eastern Traditions of Linguistics
Volume II: Classical and Medieval Linguistics
EDITED BY GIULIO LEPSCHY

Introduction

This work originated in the discussions held by a group of advisors for linguistics of the Italian publishers il Mulino. Examining the areas in which new and useful initiatives could be encouraged, it was thought that a large-scale history of linguistics would meet a widely felt need, and I was asked to elaborate a plan for such a work. The preparation and completion of the project took about ten years, and the work, written by scholars from different countries, began appearing in Italian in 1990. This English edition has been reorganized into four volumes. In this introduction I shall say something about the nature and contents of this work, and its place within the present panorama of linguistic historiography.

What I had in mind was a history of linguistic thought, rather than an account of the development of linguistic science. In other words, for different societies and in different periods, I wanted to have a presentation of the prevailing attitudes towards language: its social, cultural, religious and liturgical functions, the prestige attached to different varieties, the cultivation of a standard, the place of language in education, the elaboration of lexical and grammatical descriptions, the knowledge of foreign idioms, the status of interpreters and translators, and so on.

This implies of course a 'view from within', that is, presenting the linguistic interests and assumptions of individual cultures in their own terms, without trying to transpose and reshape them into the context of our ideas of what the scientific study of language ought to be. The purpose is an understanding of what certain societies thought about language, rather than an assessment of their ideas on a scale of scientific progress.

The problem is familiar to historians of science and the line I am following does not necessarily imply a lack of confidence in the possibility of obtaining reliable findings in linguistic study. Whether 'science' is the most suitable term for what linguistics does, is of course open to debate: see Chomsky (1969, 56) and Graffi (1991b). In any case, the authors of different chapters were also encouraged not to enlarge on methodological problems posed by linguistic historiography but to concentrate instead on the presentation of facts, on the interpretation of texts which they considered relevant and interesting for the periods and cultures they were discussing. But, after obtaining the agreement of my authors concerning the general aims, I left them completely free to organize their chapters as they thought fit, without trying to impose a unifying format, because I thought that differences of perspective and treatment would contribute to highlighting specific features of individual traditions. For instance, the chapters on Indian and Arabic concentrate on the elaboration of grammatical analysis, in both cases an important contribution of these civilizations, whereas the Hebrew chapter places more stress on the theological, mystical and philosophical context of Jewish reflections on language.

The content of the four volumes of the English edition is as follows: Volume I includes the ancient traditions, each of which develops in a manner which is, from a viewpoint both cultural and chronological, largely independent, apart from obvious connections, like those between Arabic and Hebrew thought in the Middle Ages. (The Graeco-Roman tradition, which is the basis of those reflections on language which we present chronologically in Volumes II–IV, appears at the beginning of the second volume.) Chapter 1, by Göran Malmqvist, of Stockholm University, describes the development of Chinese linguistics, analysing the relevant lexicographical and grammatical works, and throwing light on the particular shape imposed on phonological analysis by the logographic nature of Chinese script. Chapter 2, by George Cardona, of the University of Pennsylvania, presents the Indian grammatical tradition, its cultural and religious implications, and particularly the contribution of Pāṇini, illustrating its systematic character and its attention to detail. Chapter 3, supervised by Erica Reiner, of the University of Chicago, presents and interprets the documents which bear witness to linguistic interests and knowledge in the civilizations of the ancient near East; the chapter is divided into three sections, devoted to Ancient Egyptian (by Janet Johnson), Sumerian (by Miguel Civil), and Akkadian (by Erica Reiner). Chapter 4, by Raphael Loewe, of the University of London, examines the place of language within the Hebrew tradition, from the Biblical period, through the Talmudists, the mystics, the enlightenment, down to the rebirth of Hebrew as an everyday language, paying particular attention to the philosophical and cultural implications of these trends. Chapter 5, by the late Henri Fleisch, of Saint Joseph University in Beirut, probably the last essay to flow from the pen of this eminent scholar, deals synthetically with the original system of grammatical analysis elaborated by the great Arabic civilization of the Middle Ages.

The following volumes present the main stages of the European tradition, in their chronological succession. They include two chapters each. In Volume II, the first chapter, by Peter Matthews, of Cambridge University, deals with classical linguistics and offers a reading of the main texts of the Graeco-Roman world which elaborate the grammatical categories on which we still base our analysis of language. The second chapter, by Edoardo Vineis, of Bologna University, and (for the philosophy of language) by Alfonso Maierù, of Rome University, present a detailed discussion of language study from the end of the sixth to the end of the fourteenth century, not limited to the late medieval period which has received most attention in recent years (with particular reference to Modistic philosophy), but extending to the less frequently studied early Middle Ages.

In Volume III, the first chapter, by Mirko Tavoni, of Pisa University, covers the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, and is completed by two sections, one on Slavia Romana, by M. D. Gandolfo, and one on Slavia Orthodoxa, by S. Toscano; the bibliography of this chapter takes advantage of the great Renaissance Linguistic Archive set up by M. Tavoni at the Istituto di Studi Rinascimentali in Ferrara. The second chapter, by Raffaele Simone, of Rome University, offers a helpful map of the varied terrain constituted by seventeenth- and eighteenth-century culture, in which many of the roots are found from which the great plant of later comparative linguistics derives its nourishment; R. Simone, who is a professional linguist, keeps in mind the philosophical perspective that is particularly relevant for this period.

In Volume IV, the first chapter, by Anna Morpurgo Davies, of Oxford University, examines the flowering of historical and comparative linguistics in the nineteenth century, stressing in particular some aspects which traditional presentations, focusing on the Neogrammarians, sometimes leave in the shadow, like the interest in typological classifications, and the importance for comparative philology of the newly constituted German university system in the first three decades of the century. The second chapter, by the editor of this work, offers a synthesis of the main developments in twentieth-century linguistics, extending from the progress of comparative studies to linguistic theory, philosophy of language, and the investigation of language use in different areas, from literature to social communication. The Italian edition also includes a chapter on the history of Italian linguistics and dialectology, by Paola Benincà, of Padua University, which has been omitted from the English edition.

Let us briefly look at the present state of linguistic historiography. Over the last three decades there has been a considerable revival of interest in this field. In 1974 Konrad Koerner, a German scholar teaching in Canada, founded the journal Historiographia Linguistica, which has become a forum for international discussion on the history of linguistics; in 1978 he was the organizer of the first international congress on the history of linguistics (the meetings continue at three-yearly intervals). There are also several other associations devoted to the history of linguistics, like the Société d'histoire et d'épistémologie des sciences du langage, created in 1978, presided over by S. Auroux, which publishes a Bulletin and the journal Histoire Épistémologie Langage (1979-); the Henry Sweet Society for the History of Linguistic Ideas, founded in 1984 on the initiative of Vivian Salmon, which organizes regular meetings and publishes a Newsletter; the North American Association for the History of the Language Sciences, founded in 1987. The interest in the history of linguistics over this period is also indicated by the publication of monographs and collections of studies, such as Hymes (1974), Parret (1976), Grotzsch (1982), Schmitter (1982), Chevalier and Encrevé (1984), Bynon and Palmer (1986), Formigari and Lo Piparo (1988), and by the two tomes devoted to the historiography of linguistics by Sebeok (1975).

A separate study would be necessary to examine the main available histories of linguistics, from the great works of the nineteenth century devoted to Classical linguistics by Steinthal (1863), to Oriental philology by Benfey (1869), and to Germanic philology by R. von Raumer (1870). Subsequent studies witness the triumph of Neogrammarian comparative philology, from Delbrück (1880) to Meillet (1903) to Pedersen (1924). Since the 1960s numerous historical presentations have been published, from the large and well-informed work by Tagliavini (1963), lacking however in historical perspective and theoretical insight, to the two-volume contribution by Mounin (1967-72), the neat and well-balanced book by Robins (1967), the acute and comprehensive synthesis by Law (1990), the disappointing attempts by Malmberg (1991) and Itkonen (1991). Large-scale works have also started appearing in the last few years, under the direction of Auroux (n.d.) and of Schmitter (1987). There is no space to mention in this context the great many studies devoted, since the 1960s, to individual periods and problems in the history of linguistics, although they often provide the detailed groundwork that makes possible overall synthetic assessments (some titles will be quoted in the list of references).

What is the place of our history of linguistics against this background? To me it seems to be placed in an advantageous position, in the middle ground between the concise, one-author profiles on the one hand, and the extended, multi-authored, multi-volume series on the other. Compared to the former, it has the greater richness of detail, which is made possible by the larger space available and the higher degree of reliability that derives from the authority of contributors who are specialists in the individual areas; compared to the latter, it is more compact and coherent in perspective and basic assumptions, and it can not only be consulted for single questions, or studied in individual sections, but also be read in its entirety.

If I were asked to present a schematic précis of the main features which I see as inspiring this work and characterizing its realization, I would list the following points:

1. A perspective directed towards understanding the past, rather than dealing with present-day concerns. The aim is to reconstruct and illustrate different epochs and traditions within their own context and on the basis of their own values, rather than of their appeal to present-day preoccupations; to highlight their linguistic interests, rather than our own.
2. This is a history of linguistic thought, of interests and attitudes toward language. These may or may not find a place within the elaboration of a 'scientific' study of language (however we may want to define it), but in any case I feel that an account of the preoccupations with linguistic matters in different societies proves to be an interesting and worthwhile object of historical investigation.
3. I have considered it essential, in my choice of authors for individual chapters, that they should be specialists, able to analyse the relevant texts in the original languages, and to present them to a lay readership. I aimed at obtaining not an account of what is known, derived from current literature, but a series of original contributions based on first-hand study of the primary sources.
4. From what precedes it is clear that this work is prevalently concerned with a historical and philological study of ideas, texts from the past, rather than with methodological and theoretical problems posed by historiography. It is an 'extroverted', rather than an 'introverted' history, dealing with the facts it analyses, rather than with the theoretical and ideological assumptions which lie behind the work of the historian. This obviously does not imply that methodological questions are not a legitimate object of study; but I believe that it is possible to offer useful contributions on the history of linguistics, without dealing in the first instance with the theory of historiography.

5. One of the main linguists of our times, Yakov Malkiel, observed some years ago (Malkiel and Langdon 1969) that to produce good work on the history of linguistics it is not enough to be a linguist: one has also to be a historian, and to fulfil the expectations normally raised by a historical essay. Here, of course, one can only observe that the ability to set some episodes of the history of linguistics within their social and cultural context, is the exception rather than the rule (examples that come to mind are those of Dionisotti (1967a,b, 1972) or Timpanaro (1963, 1965, 1972, 1973)). What I had in mind for this history of linguistics was the more modest aim of providing information about ideas on language, in different periods and societies, which are not easily (and in some cases not at all) accessible elsewhere.

I know from direct experience that linguists feel the need for a work of this kind, and I hope it may also appeal to readers who are interested to know how people, at different times and within different cultural traditions, have looked at one of the most essential and challenging features of our common humanity – that is, language.

G. C. Lepschy

References

- AARSLEFF, H. (1982) From Locke to Saussure. Essays on the Study of Language and Intellectual History, University of Minnesota Press, Minneapolis.
- AMIROVA, T. A., OL'KHOVIKOV, B. A. and ROŽDESTVENSKIJ, JU. V. (1975) Očerki po istorii lingvistiki, Nauka, Moskva (German tr. Abriss der Geschichte der Sprachwissenschaft, Veb Bibliographisches Institut, Leipzig 1980).
- AUROY, S. (ed.) (n.d.) Histoire des idées linguistiques. Tome 1: La naissance des métalangages. En Orient et en Occident, Mardaga, Liège/Bruxelles.
- AUROY, S. (1992) Histoire des idées linguistiques. Tome 2: Le développement de la grammaire occidentale, Mardaga, Liège.

- BENFEY, T. (1869) Geschichte der Sprachwissenschaft und orientalischen Philologie in Deutschland, seit dem Anfange des 19. Jahrhunderts mit einem Rückblick auf die früheren Zeiten, Cotta, München.
- BORST, A. (1957–63) Der Turmbau von Babel. Geschichte der Meinungen über Ursprung und Vielfalt der Sprachen und Völker, Hiersemann, Stuttgart.
- BRINCAT, G. (1986) La linguistica prestrutturale, Zanichelli, Bologna.
- BYNON, T. and PALMER, F. R. (eds) (1986) Studies in the History of Western Linguistics. In Honour of R. H. Robins, Cambridge University Press, Cambridge.
- CHEVALIER, J.-C. and ENCREVÉ, P. (eds) (1984) Vers une histoire sociale de la linguistique (Langue Française, 63), Larousse, Paris.
- CHOMSKY, N. (1966) Cartesian Linguistics. A Chapter in the History of Rationalist Thought, Harper and Row, New York.
- CHOMSKY, N. (1969) Linguistics and Philosophy, in Language and Philosophy. A Symposium, edited by S. Hook, New York University Press, New York, 51–94.
- DELBRÜCK, B. (1880) Einleitung in das Sprachstudium. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte und Methodik der vergleichenden Sprachforschung, Breitkopf und Härtel, Leipzig.
- DIONISOTTI, C. (1967a) La lingua italiana da Venezia all'Europa. Il Fortunio e la filologia umanistica. Niccolò Liburnio e la letteratura cortigiana, in Rinascimento europeo e Rinascimento veneziano, edited by V. Branca, Sansoni, Firenze, 1–46.
- DIONISOTTI, C. (1967b) Geografia e storia della letteratura italiana, Einaudi, Torino.
- DIONISOTTI, C. (1972) A Year's Work in the Seventies. The Presidential Address of the Modern Humanities Research Association delivered at University College, London, on 7 January 1972, reprinted from The Modern Language Review, Vol. 67, No. 4.
- FORMIGARI, L. and LO PIPARO, F. (eds) (1988) Prospettive di storia della linguistica, Editori Riuniti, Roma.
- GRAFFI, G. (1991a) La sintassi tra Ottocento e Novecento, il Mulino, Bologna.
- GRAFFI, G. (1991b) Concetti 'ingenui' e concetti 'teorici' in sintassi, Lingua e Stile, 26, 347–63.
- GROTSCH, K. (1982) Sprachwissenschaftsgeschichtsschreibung. Ein Beitrag zur Kritik und zur historischen und methodologischen Selbstvergewisserung der Disziplin, Kümmerle Verlag, Göppingen.
- HYMES, D. (ed.) (1974) Studies in the History of Linguistics, Indiana University Press, Bloomington.
- ITKONEN, E. (1991) Universal History of Linguistics, Benjamins, Amsterdam.
- KOERNER, K. (1978) Towards a Historiography of Linguistics. Selected Essays, Benjamins, Amsterdam.
- KOERNER, K. (1989) Practicing Linguistic Historiography. Selected Essays, Benjamins, Amsterdam.
- LAW, V. (1990) Language and Its Students: the History of Linguistics, in

- An Encyclopedia of Language*, edited by N. E. Collinge, Routledge, London/New York, 784–842.
- LEPSCHY, G. (ed.) (1990) Storia della linguistica, vol. 1 and 2, il Mulino, Bologna.
- MALKIEL, Y., LANGDON, M. (1969) History and Histories of Linguistics, Romance Philology, 22, 530–74.
- MALMBERG, B. (1991) Histoire de la linguistique de Sumer à Saussure, Presses Universitaires de France, Paris.
- MEILLET, A. (1903) Introduction à l'étude comparative des langues indoeuropéennes, Hachette, Paris (eighth edition, 1937).
- MOUNIN, G. (1967–72) Histoire de la linguistique, 2 vols, Presses Universitaires de France, Paris.
- OL'KHOVNIKOV, B. A. (1985) Teorija jazyka i vid grammatičeskogo opisanija v istorii jazykoznanija. Stanovlenie i evolucija kanona grammatičeskogo opisanija v Evrope, Nauka, Moskva.
- PARRET, H. (ed.) (1976) History of Linguistic Thought and Contemporary Linguistics, de Gruyter, Berlin.
- PEDERSEN, H. (1924) Sprogvidenskaben i det Nittende Aarhundrede. Metoder og Resultater, Gyldendalske Boghandel, København (English tr. Linguistic Science in the Nineteenth Century, Harvard University Press, Cambridge, Massachusetts 1931; and with the new title The Discovery of Language. Linguistic Science in the Nineteenth Century, Indiana University Press, Bloomington 1962).
- RAUMER, R. VON (1870) Geschichte der germanischen Philologie vorzugsweise in Deutschland, Oldenbourg, München.
- ROBINS, R. H. (1967) A Short History of Linguistics, Longman, London (third edition, 1990).
- SALMON, V. (1979) The Study of Language in Seventeenth-Century England, Benjamins, Amsterdam.
- SCHMITTER, P. (1982) Untersuchungen zur Historiographie der Linguistik. Struktur – Methodik – Theoretische Fundierung, Narr, Tübingen.
- SCHMITTER, P. (ed.) (1987) Zur Theorie und Methode der Geschichtsschreibung der Linguistik. Analysen und Reflexionen (Geschichte der Sprachtheorie, 1), Narr, Tübingen.
- SEBEOK, T. (ed.) (1975) Historiography of Linguistics (Current Trends in Linguistics, 13), Mouton, The Hague.
- STEINTHAL, H. (1863) Geschichte der Sprachwissenschaft bei den Griechen und Römern mit besonderer Rücksicht auf die Logik, Dümmler, Berlin (second edition, 1890–91).
- TAGLIAVINI, C. (1963) Panorama di storia della linguistica, Pàtron, Bologna.
- TIMPANARO, S. (1963) La genesi del metodo del Lachmann, Le Monnier, Firenze (new edition, Liviana, Padova 1985).
- TIMPANARO, S. (1965) Classicismo e illuminismo nell'Ottocento italiano, Nistri Lischi, Pisa (second, enlarged edition, 1969).
- TIMPANARO, S. (1972) Friedrich Schlegel e gli inizi della linguistica indoeuropea in Germania, Critica Storica, 9, 72–105.
- TIMPANARO, S. (1973) Il contrasto tra i fratelli Schlegel e Franz Bopp sulla struttura e la genesi delle lingue indoeuropee, Critica Storica, 10, 53–90.

Acknowledgements

In the preparation of the Italian edition I availed myself of the advice of many friends and colleagues. For Volume I, I should like to thank in particular Zyg Barański, Verina Jones, Anna Morpurgo Davies, Joanna Weinberg (Introduction); Michael Halliday and Michael Loewe (Chapter 1); Anna Morpurgo Davies (Chapter 2); Arnaldo Momigliano (Chapter 3); Ada Rapoport and Joanna Weinberg (Chapter 4); Bernard Lewis (Chapter 5); for Volume II, Tullio De Mauro (Chapter 2); for Volume III: Giuseppe Dell'Agata (Chapter 1), Tullio De Mauro (Chapter 2). I am grateful to Emma Sansone, who has sensitively and helpfully performed the difficult job of translating into English chapters originally in other languages (Volume I, Chapter 5; Volume II, Chapter 2; Volume III, Chapters 1 and 2; Volume IV, Chapter 2). I should also like to thank the series' editors for their advice and comments during the preparation of the English edition. The English version introduces some updatings and improvements on the previous Italian edition. In particular Volume I, Chapter 4 includes a more detailed discussion of Hebrew grammatical ideas. For help and advice concerning the history of Arabic linguistics (Volume I, Chapter 5) I am grateful to Professor E. Ullendorff and Professor A. F. L. Beeston. I am grateful to Emma Sansone for her assistance in preparing the Index of Volume II, and to Rolando Ferri for help in correcting the proofs.

Notes on the contributors

George Cardona received a BA from New York University and an MA and PhD in Indo-European Linguistics from Yale University. He has spent several years studying texts of traditional śāstras with paṇḍitas in India (Vadodra, Varanasi, Madras). Since 1960 he has taught at the University of Pennsylvania, first in the Department of South Asian Studies, then (since 1965) in the Department of Linguistics. His major fields of interests and research are ancient Indian grammatical thought, Indo-Aryan, and Indo-Iranian. Among his works are A Gujarati Reference Grammar (Philadelphia 1965), Pāṇini, a Survey of Research (The Hague 1976; reprinted Delhi 1980), and Pāṇini's Grammar and its Traditions. Volume 1: Background and Introduction (Delhi 1988).

Miguel Civil born in Sabadell (Barcelona, Spain) studied Assyriology in Paris (École Pratique des Hautes Études and Collège de France). He worked with Professor S. N. Kramer in Philadelphia for several years and then joined the staff of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. His speciality is Sumerian texts and grammar, with emphasis on lexicography. He is co-editor of Materials for the Sumerian Lexicon and member of the editorial board of the Chicago Assyrian Dictionary.

Henri Fleisch (1904–85) born in Jonville (France); a Jesuit, he studied in the schools of his Order and in Paris, École de Langues Orientales Vivantes (1934–36) and at the Sorbonne. In 1938 he was appointed Professor of Arabic Philology at the Institut de Lettres Orientales in Beirut, and then Director of the Prehistory Museum, and Scriptor at the Saint-Joseph University. Among his works: Introduction à l'étude des langues sémitiques (Paris 1947); L'Arabe classique. Esquisse d'une structure linguistique (Beirut 1956), Traité de philologie arabe (Beirut, vol. 1, 1961, vol. 2, 1979); Études d'arabe dialectal (Beirut 1974).

Maria Delfina Gandolfo, born in Rome, graduated in Genoa in Russian Language and Literature, with a thesis on the history of alphabets in the Slavic world. She took an MA and an MPhil at Yale University, and is preparing a PhD dissertation on the orthographic questions in the Slavic tradition.

Janet H. Johnson, born in Everett, Washington, studied at the University of Chicago and is now Professor of Egyptology at the Oriental Institute at that University. Her major philological interests are in Demotic (Egyptian) and the synchronic and diachronic studies of the ancient Egyptian language. She has written The Demotic Verbal System (Chicago 1976), Thus Wrote 'Onchsheshonqy: An Introductory Grammar of Demotic (Chicago 1986), and numerous articles on the grammar of various stages of Egyptian, including the summary and overview in Crossroads: Chaos or the Beginning of a New Paradigm, Papers from the Conference on Egyptian Grammar held in Helsingør, 28–30 May 1986.

Giulio Lepschy, born in Venice, studied at the Universities of Pisa (Scuola Normale Superiore) and Zürich, Oxford, Paris and London. He is Professor in the Department of Italian Studies at the University of Reading, and a Fellow of the British Academy. His research work is mainly on Italian linguistics and dialectology, and on the history of linguistics. Among his publications are: A Survey of Structural Linguistics (London 1970); (with Anna Laura Lepschy) The Italian Language Today (London 1977); Saggi di linguistica italiana (Bologna 1978); Intorno a Saussure (Turin 1979); Sulla linguistica moderna (Bologna 1989); Nuovi saggi di linguistica italiana (Bologna 1989); La linguistica del Novecento (Bologna 1992).

Raphael Loewe studied classics at Cambridge before 1939 and semitics (also subsequently in Oxford) after the War. He held teaching posts and fellowships at Leeds, Cambridge, Providence, Rhode Island, and at University College, London, whence he retired from the Goldsmid Chair of Hebrew in 1984. He has concerned himself mainly with the impact of Jewish biblical exegesis and legend on European scholasticism, and with Hebrew poetry in Spain. His publications include: The Medieval History of the Latin Vulgate, in The Cambridge History of the Bible, 2 (Cambridge 1969); The Rylands Haggadah (London 1988); Ibn Gabirol (London 1989).

Alfonso Maierù studied at the University of Rome La Sapienza, where he teaches History of Medieval Philosophy. He has worked mainly on medieval logic (Terminologia logica della tarda scolastica, Rome 1972), dealing with some of its problematic aspects (he has written several essays on Trinitarian theology and logic). Since 1978 he has also been working on scholastic institutions and teaching techniques, and on philosophical terminology in Dante.

Göran Malmqvist, Professor of Chinese at the University of Stockholm and a member of the Swedish Academy. He taught Chinese at the School of Oriental and African Studies in London (1953–5); served as Cultural Attaché to the Swedish Embassy in Peking (1956–8) and as reader and subsequently professor in Chinese at the Australian National University in Canberra in 1956–65. He has published in the fields of Chinese dialectology, classical and modern Chinese syntax, Chinese metrics and textual criticism. He has also translated a number of Chinese literary works into Swedish. Among his publications are: The Syntax of Bound Forms in Sich'uanese, BMFEA (Bulletin of the Museum of Far Eastern Antiquities), 33, 1961, 125–99; Studies in Western Mandarin Phonology, BMFEA, 34, 1962, 129–92; Problems and Methods in Chinese Linguistics (Canberra 1962); Han Phonology and Textual Criticism (Canberra 1963); Studies on the Gongyang and Guuliang Commentaries, I, BMFEA, 43, 1971, 67–222; II, BMFEA, 47, 1975, 19–69; III, BMFEA, 49, 1977, 33–215.

Peter Hugoe Matthews, born near Oswestry in England; graduated at the University of Cambridge 1957; has taught general linguistics at Bangor, North Wales, at Reading, and, since 1980, at Cambridge, where he is at present Professor of Linguistics and Fellow of St John's College. He is a Fellow of the British Academy. Principal research interests in syntax, morphology and the history of linguistics. His main publications are: Inflectional Morphology (Cambridge 1972); Morphology (Cambridge 1974); Generative Grammar and Linguistic Competence (London 1979); Syntax (Cambridge 1981); Grammatical Theory in the United States from Bloomfield to Chomsky (Cambridge 1993).

Anna Morpurgo Davies, born in Milan, graduated at the University of Rome before spending a year at Harvard University. She is Professor of Comparative Philology at the University of Oxford,