One day in 1925 John Baird pulled an officer boy into his workroom and sat him down in front of his equipment. The boy's face could clearly be seen on the simple screen a few feet away. The officer boy was the first person ever to appear on television!

Baird was the son of a clergyman (牧师). He went to a technical college and then to Glasgow University. It was there he first had the idea of transmitting pictures.

He was not a healthy man. That's why he was rejected for army service at the time of the First World War and had to work in a power station. After the war he tried to set up in business several times without real success. Returning to London he started again on his idea of television.

He was so poor that he accepted an offer to show his experiments in a big London store. Money from his parents allowed him to continue his work. When he gained more success and transmitted a reasonably clear picture over long distances, he was offered help. Businessmen who before had refused to help now eagerly offered to share in the development of this invention. Big companies in America spent a lot of money in improving his equipment. When the BBC made the first ever television broadcast in 1936, American equipment was used. When the BBC started its television service again after the Second World War, it used equipment from Baird's company.

Our village carpenter, Alf Winn, came one day and made a kitchen cupboard for my wife. He made it just the right size to fill the useless space between the cooker and the door. When I got home that evening, Alf was drinking a cup of tea and making out his bill for the job.

My wife said to me, quietly, "That's his ninth cup of tea today." But she said, loudly, "It's a beautiful cupboard, dear, isn't it?"

Alf laughed and gave me his account for the work. I read:

One kitchen cupboard	10 Nov. 1995
Cost of materials (wood)	17 pounds
Paint and fittings	1.5 pounds
Work, 8 hours (I pound an hour)	8 pounds

Alf said, "It's been a lovely day, hasn't it? Quite sunny."

"Yes," I said, "I am glad it's only the 10th of November."

"Yes, colder and dearer! Kitchen cupboards will be 20 dearer on November 30, won't they, Alf?"

Alf looked hard at me for half a minutes. Was there a little smile in his two blue eyes? I gave his account back to him.

"If it isn't too much trouble, Alf," I said, "please add it up again. You can forget the date."

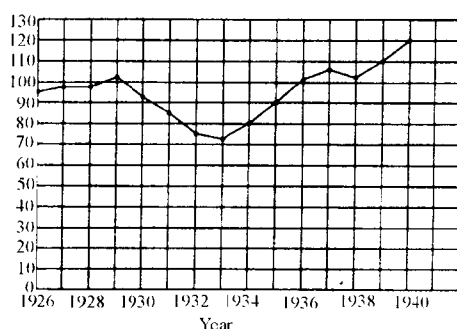

I wrote him a check for 26.5 pounds. He was happy to accept it.
