Directions: There are 4 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C, and D. You should decide on the best choice and mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage One

Questions 21-25 are based on the following passage:

Living organisms are indeed complicated and highly organized, but it is now clear that no new scientific laws are required to explain their complexity and organization. Just as living organisms like ourselves are composed of many different kinds of organs, each with its own specific part to play in ensuring the proper functioning of the whole organism, so at a deeper level the tissues of all living things are composed of many kinds of complex molecules. Each of those chemical compounds, like each organ in the body, seems to have a specific role to play in the healthy functioning of the whole, and some of those molecules may contain tens of thousands, even hundreds of thousands, of atoms.

The essence of life — ultimately due to the behavior of those complex molecules working together — is the ability of living things to extract energy from their environment and to use that energy both to build up their own complex structures and to copy themselves ... to reproduce. For all life on the surface of the earth, the ultimate source of that energy is sunlight, trapped in plants by photosynthesis. Cells function as chemical engines, storing and transmitting energy in chemical form, as energetic molecules which can give it up when and where required; animals tap that storehouse of energy by eating plants, or by eating other animals which have themselves eaten plants. (Very recently, organisms have been found in the deep ocean, far from any source of sunlight; they derive their energy from underwater volcanic hotspots and lead their lives quite cut off from the ecological web above them. Like us, however, they depend on an outside source of energy.)

- the ecological web above them. Like us, however, they depend of 21. The main purpose of the passage is to _____.

  A. explain the organization of living organisms

  B. show how life sustains itself

  C. describe the functioning of molecules

  D. introduce the relationship between animals and plants

  22. The first paragraph tells us all the following EXECPT _____.

  A. atoms are the smallest particles in a living body

  B. living things are composed of organs

  C. each complex molecule contributes to the living organism

  D. each organ has its own specific function

  23. The word "it" in line 6, para. 2 could be replaced by _____.

  A. cell B. molecule C. life D. energy

  24. According to the passage, which of the following is NOT essen
- 24. According to the passage, which of the following is NOT essential to any living organisms?
  - A. The obtaining of energy from external environment.
  - B. The development of their body structures.
  - C. The storing of the energy from sunlight.
  - D. The reproduction of their coming generation.
- 25. The author introduced the living organisms in the deep ocean to show all of the following

EXECPT that .

- A. their external environment is quite different from that of other living things
- B. they don't have any links with other living organisms on the earth
- C. they can not directly draw energy from sunlight
- D. they still obtain energy from outside source

Passage Two

Questions 26-30 are based on the following passage:

There are two types of people in the world. Although they have equal degrees of health and wealth and the other comforts of life, one becomes happy, the other becomes miserable. This arises from the different ways in which they consider things, persons, and events, and the resulting effects upon their minds. The people who are to be happy fix their attention on the conveniences of things, the pleasant parts of conversation, the well-prepared dishes, the goodness of the wines, the fine weather. They enjoy all the cheerful things. Those who are to be unhappy think and speak only of the contrary things. Therefore, they are continually discontented. By their remarks, they sour the pleasures of society, offend many people, and make themselves disagreeable everywhere. If this turn of mind were founded in nature, such unhappy persons would be the more to be pitied. The tendency to criticize and be disgusted is perhaps taken up originally by imitation. It grows into a habit, unknown to its possessors. The habit may be strong, but it may be cured when those who have it are convinced of bad effects on their interests and tastes. I hope this little warning may be of service to them, and help them change this habit.

Although in fact it is chiefly an act of the imagination, it has serious consequences in life, since it brings on deep sorrow and bad luck. Those people offend many others, nobody loves them, and no one treats them with more than the most common politeness and respect, and scarcely that. This frequently puts them in bad temper and draws them into arguments. If they aim at obtaining some advantage in rank or fortune, nobody wishes them success. Nor will anyone stir a step or speak a word to favor their hopes. If they bring on themselves public disapproval, no one will defend or excuse them, and many will join to criticize their misconduct. These people should change this bad habit and condescend (俯就) to be pleased with what is pleasing, without worrying needlessly about themselves and others. If they do not, it will be good for others to avoid any contact with them. Otherwise, it can be disagreeable and sometimes very inconvenient, especially when one becomes mixed up in their quarrels.

- 26. People who are unhappy
  - A. always consider things differently from others
  - B. usually are influenced by the results of certain things
  - C. can discover the unpleasant part of certain things
  - D. usually have a fault finding habit
- 27. The phrase "sour the pleasures of society" (in line 8-9, para.1) most nearly means
  - A. have a good taste to the pleasures of society
  - B. aren't content with the pleasures of society

- C. feel happy with the pleasures of society
- D. enjoy the pleasures of society
- 28. Which of the following statements is NOT true according to the passage?
  - A. We should pity all such unhappy people.
  - B. Such unhappy people are critical about everything.
  - C. If such unhappy people recognize the bad effects of the habits on themselves, they may get rid of it.
  - D. Such unhappy people are also not content with themselves.
- 29. The phrase "scarcely that" (in line 3, para. 2) means _____.
  - A. "just like that"

B. "almost not like that"

C. "more than that"

- D. "not at all like that"
- 30. If such unhappy persons don't change their bad behavior, the author's solution to the problem is that .
  - A. people should avoid contact with them
  - B. people should criticize their misconduct
  - C. people should help them recognize the bad effects of the habit
  - D. people should show no respect and politeness to them

Passage Three

Questions 31-35 are based on the following passage:

The way you look ... the body that is yours ... has several relatively permanent features that disclose information about you. As you take the platform to speak, listeners can observe your physical features and infer your sex, general age range, racial background, height, weight, and body type. Sometimes audiences respond to personal appearance in a fixed manner. As a result, they may discount messages given by speakers who are very much younger than themselves. Other audiences similarly pay less attention to the speeches of women or of people from other cultural groups.

Many people have one or more physical features or conditions that make them reluctant to speak publicly. These include crooked teeth, visible birthmarks, above-average or below-average weight or height, poor eyesight, or the use of wheelchairs. Although it is true that people do see your features, it is generally not true that they spend the entire speech time focusing on them. If you worry about your appearance, one of your best strategies is to have interesting topic and a good opening statement that draw people's attention to your subject rather than to your looks.

Regardless of your looks, you can pay special attention to your appearance such as dressing neatly, keeping your hair tidy, etc. Neatness and cleanliness are sometimes as significant as natural beauty; in fact, a common proverb, "Cleanliness is next to godliness," gives a very good example of this. Further, as we will see, social attractiveness is enhanced by other nonverbal variables such as smiling and gesturing appropriately. Moreover, physical characteristics are not the only thing your listeners see. The clothing and accessories you choose are parts of your total presentation of yourself.

31. This passage may be taken from _____

- A. a magazine designed for teachers
- B. a newspaper addressing to those who will run for office
- C. a book of Public Speech
- D. a textbook for potential actors
- 32. The sentence "Sometimes audiences may discount messages given by certain speakers" (in line
  - 5, para.1) means .
  - A. sometimes they pay less attention to certain speakers
  - B. sometimes they dislike those speakers
  - C. sometimes they listen to speeches attentively
  - D. sometimes they look down upon those speakers
- 33. People often feel shy to speak in public if _____.
  - A. they are younger than the audiences
  - B. they have some physical defects
  - C. they are female and not pretty
  - D. they cannot draw the audiences' attention to their subjects
- 34. Social attractiveness can be improved by ____.
  - A. a good opening statement
  - B. the humorous way you talk
  - C. a young look and pleasant way of talking
  - D. nonverbal factors such as smiling and proper clothing
- 35. Which of the following statements is NOT true?
  - A. If a speaker worries about his appearance, he can find some ways to distract people's attention from his looks.
  - B. During a speech, people generally won't spend the whole time on the speaker's appearance.
  - C. If one keeps his hair tidy and his appearance neat and clean, then he possesses the natural beauty.
  - D. Proper clothing and accessories can also improve one's social attractiveness.

Passage Four

Questions 36-40 are based on the following passage:

Testing has replaced teaching in most public schools. My own children's school week is framed by pretests, drills, tests, and retests. They know that the best way to read a textbook is to look at the questions at the end of the chapter and then skim the text for the answers. I believe that my daughter Erica, who gets excellent marks, has never read a chapter of her school textbooks all the way through. And teachers are often heard to state proudly and openly that they teach to the mandated state test.

Teaching to the test is a curious phenomenon. Instead of deciding what skills students ought to learn, helping students learn them, and then using some sensible methods of assessment (评估) to discover whether students have mastered the skills, teachers are encouraged to reverse the process. First one looks at a commercially available test. Then one distills (去除) the skills needed not to master reading, say, or math, but to do well on the test. Finally, the test skills are taught.

The ability to read or write or calculate might imply the ability to do reasonably well on standardized tests. However, neither reading nor writing develops simply through being taught to take tests. We must be careful to avoid mistaking preparation for a test of a skill with the acquisition of that skill. Too many discussions of basic skills make this fundamental confusion because people are test obsessed (着魔的) rather than concerned with the nature and quality of what is taught.

Recently many schools have faced what could be called the crisis of comprehension or, in simple terms, the phenomenon of students with phonic and grammar skills still being unable to understand what they read. These students are competent at test taking and filling in workbooks and ditto(复制品) masters. However they have little or no experience reading or thinking, and talking about what they read. They know the details but couldn't see or understand the whole. They are taught to be so concerned with grade that they have no time or ease of mind to think about meaning, and reread things if necessary.

D. are unable to understand what they read, though they do reasonably well on standardized tests who is a 79 scientist is primarily interested in doing his research 80. He is not necessarily working 81 that his findings can be used.

An inventor or one interested in applied science is 82 trying to make something that has a concrete 83. He may try to solve a problem by using the theories 84 science or by experimenting through trial and error. Regardless of his method, he is working to obtain a 85 result: the construction of a harvesting machine, the burning of a light bulb, or one of 86 other objectives.

Most of the people who 87 the machines of the Industrial Revolution were inventors, not trained scientists. A few were both scientists and inventors. Even those who had 88 or no training in science might not have made their inventions 89 a groundwork had not been laid by scientists years 90.
