Now satellites are helping to forecast (预报) the weather. They are in space, and they can reach any part of the world. The satellites take pictures of the atmosphere (大气), because this is where the weather forms (形成). They send these pictures to the weather stations. So meteorologists (气象学家) can see the weather of any part of the world. From the pictures, the scientists can often say how the weather will change. Today, nearly five hundred weather stations in sixty countries receive satellite pictures. When they receive new pictures, the meteorologists compare (比较) them with earlier ones. Perhaps they may find that the clouds have changed during the last few hours. This may mean that the weather on the ground may soon change, too. In their next weather forecast, the meteorologists can say this. So the weather satellites are a great help to the meteorologists. Before satellites were invented, the scientists could forecast the weather for about 24 or 48 hours. Now they can make good forecasts for three or five days. Soon, perhaps, they may be able to forecast the weather for a week or more ahead (提前).

One evening Mr. Harris was on duty when the phone rang. He went to answer it. It was Mrs. Green. "Please, sir, come to my house. I had 5,000 dollars stolen."

Mr. Harris hurried to her house. He asked Mrs. Green, "When did you find the money missing?" "At seven, I put my money on the table in the living-room. Then I went to wash my hair. I came back at seven thirty and the money was gone." "I see," Mr. Harris said, "Were you alone in the house?" "No. My sister's daughter, Nancy, was here, too." "Let's talk to Nancy," said Mr. Harris. They went to Nancy's room.

Mr. Harris sat on the only chair in the room. The chair was cold. Mrs. Green and Nancy sat on the bed. Mr. Harris saw some books on the floor near the chair. "What have you been doing this evening?"

"I've been studying because I shall have a test tomorrow. I've been sitting on that chair reading all the time. I never got up and never left my room. But at seven fifty I heard a sound, like someone closing the door. I didn't go out to have a look, for I was too busy. Maybe someone came into the house and took my aunt's money,"

After hearing that, Mr. Harris was quite clear. He said to Mrs. Green, "Well, you won't have to be worried and you'll find the 5,000 dollars just in the room."
