I am a student in a high school. There is a lady who works at my school as a campus monitor and her job is to hand out call-slips, a form filled in by students who want to leave the campus, in order to prevent students from leaving the campus without permission. Before today I had never seen her smile.

The other day my friends and I were eating in the cafeteria and I saw her walking around. When she came closer to us I could see that she was crying. She took out a tissue, wiped her eyes and left us quickly. I was really sorry for her and I thought to myself that this lady was so under-appreciated (不被理解的) and needed to be recognized for all her hard work.

After thinking that I wrote a note telling her that the students appreciated everything she did and that her contribution (贡献) to our school made a difference in all of our lives. I signed it "Some thankful students" and put it into an envelope. Then I realized I didn't even know her name. I asked all of my teachers and nobody knew her name. I finally went to the office and asked the lady who worked there. She told me that her name was Kathy.

I bought her a bouquet of colorful sunflowers and taped the envelope to it. I brought the flowers to the school and left them in her office. She came into my class shortly afterwards to deliver a call-slip, and there it was—a big smile on her face!

- What is the campus monitor's job?
 - She helps teachers correct the homework.
 - She records the grades of the students after the exam.
 - She is in charge of the cleaning of the students' dormitories.
 - It has something to do with the students' asking for leave.
- What did the writer think about the lady?
 - She was living a poor life.
 - She was very kind but a little strange.
 - She was looked down upon by students.
 - Her hard job should be recognized and paid attention to.
- The problem that the writer met was that she didn't know _____.
 - how to thank the lady
 - what the lady's name was
 - how she would talk with the lady
 - how to give the lady the flowers

You may not know a lot of people when you start high school. Even if you know some freshmen (新生), you still feel nervous that you don't know any upper-classmen and teachers. How are you going to make friends among this sea of unknown faces?

Most high schools hold a freshman orientation (训练) before school actually starts. These are helpful not only because you learn your way around the building and get to meet some of your teachers, but also because you get to meet fellow freshmen. That way, when you show up on your first day of school, you may already recognize a few familiar faces.

When you talk to people in the orientation, you'll probably find that a lot of them are feeling just like you are. They're all new to the school and don't know what to expect. Talking about a common concern with your classmates can help you develop friendships.

The work in high school is something freshmen are probably worried about. The work in high school builds on what you learned in middle school, giving you a more advanced knowledge of many subjects. So you may find you have more work to do or that it's a bit more challenging. If you ever find your work too difficult, teachers can give you extra help.

High school also has more extracurricular activities (课外活动) than middle school did such as clubs, music and theater groups and sports teams. This is a good time to explore your interests and try new things.

Middle school taught you the basics of academics, time management, and social skills while providing you with a little extra support and guidance. High school gives you the chance to learn how to be more independent and responsible.

1. According to the passage, when they come to the school on the first day freshmen usually feel _____.
 A. proud B. nervous
 C. excited D. afraid
2. What are freshmen probably worried about?
 A. The learning task.
 B. The ability to make friends.
 C. The relationship with teachers.
 D. The training in the freshman orientation.
3. Extracurricular activities mainly help students _____.
 A. build up healthy bodies
 B. develop friendships
 C. develop their interests
 D. improve their learning ability
4. This passage is written for _____.
 A. freshmen at high school
 B. freshmen's parents
 C. middle school students
 D. upper-classmen in high school
5. The last paragraph is mainly about _____.
 A. what you'll learn in high school
 B. what you learned in middle school
 C. the difference between middle school and high school
 D. the importance of being more independent and responsible

There exist cruel wars, fighting and sadness in the world today, so it's not only necessary, but also essential to have a good sense of humor just to help us go through difficult times in our lives. Putting a smile on someone's face when you know they are feeling depressed, as the saying goes, makes me feel good and warms my heart.

How would you feel if you could not joke around with your wife, husband, child, co-worker neighbor, close friend, or even just someone that you are standing in line with at your corner store? I am always saying things that make others smile or laugh, even if I don't know the person I'm joking around with. My grandma always found humor in everything she did, even if it was the hardest job anyone could imagine. This not only relieves stress in any situation, but also is common courtesy(礼貌) to speak to others that are around you.

I know of a few people that don't have a funny bone in their bodies, as they say. Everyone around them could be rolling on the floor after hearing a great joke and they would sit there without the slightest smile on their face. They don't get the joke that makes others laugh. I am busting a gut while they just sit there, looking at me as if I were from outer space. How can people not get a really funny joke?

Laughing is essential to keep your stress levels under control. Without humor we would find ourselves with a lot of psychological problems, or on a lot of medications to keep us from going crazy. There is too much sadness in this present world. It drives people crazy. We all need to find a way to pass the sadness and bring a little light into our lives. So, I believe our best medicine is to get together and tell some jokes and have some fun laughing together.

1. According to the author, humor is useful in the aspect that _____.
A. it can pick up people's spirits
B. it can help people get on well with others
C. it can help get rid of the cruelty in the world
D. it makes people more confident
2. The author answers the question in the second paragraph with _____.
A. facts and descriptions
B. evidence and argument
C. examples and conclusion
D. stories and persuasion
3. The underlined phrase "busting a gut" in the third paragraph can be replaced by _____.
A. keeping silent
B. speaking loud
C. laughing hard
D. explaining carefully
4. In the passage, the author mainly intends to _____.
A. talk about his own understanding of humor
B. encourage people to be humorous in daily life
C. introduce a practical way to get through daily life
D. convince people of the power of being optimistic about life
5. What is the author's attitude towards the present world?
A. Indifferent. B. Positive.
C. Satisfied. D. Critical.

Pumpkins are not only the most important symbol of Halloween; they are the star vegetable when it comes to the fall season in terms of decoration (装饰) and cooking uses. Often, we overlook how many different ways it can be used.

★ The pumpkin is a wonder vegetable. It has a long list of nutrients (营养物) including: Vitamins A, C, E, fiber, potassium, manganese, copper and so on. It is also low in salt, cholesterol and saturated (饱和的) fats. In its raw state, the pumpkin is a great source of nutrition.

★ When buying your pumpkins, always get them from your local farmers to support their business and the environment, plus you will be guaranteed (保证) that they are freshly grown. If you are feeling interested, you can grow your own pumpkins!

★ When carving your jack-o'-lanterns, don't throw away the seeds! They make a tasty baked treat that is healthy for you.

★ When your jack-o'-lantern has lived its last day out in the doorway, refuse the usual practice of throwing it away at once. Instead, create a compost heap (堆肥堆) and let nature do all the work. Be sure to remove the candle and all of the wax inside, and cut the pumpkin into pieces. Those leftover nutrients will help your soil.

★ Make a pie—a great way to bring family and friends together. If you are feeling even more adventurous, try cooking something new with the pumpkins and see what wonderful delicious dishes you can produce in your very own kitchen. And don't think of the pumpkin just around holidays—it's great all year round.

Several days ago, I was walking home from school and saw some writing on a fence of a house I was passing by. It said, "Happiness is a direction, not a destination(终点)." I had been having a bad day and just reading this brightened my day a little. I also took out a pen and wrote one of my favorite quotes(格言) down.

When I came back to the fence, I saw another quote under mine in the same handwriting as the first one. I added another, and we kept at this pattern for quite a while. One day, I was writing another quote on the fence and the old man, one of my neighbors, who owned the fence, saw me. He came out and I was afraid he would be mad at me for writing on his fence; he was not known to be very friendly. He gave me a sharp glance and then read the quotes on the fence. Without saying a word, he said something to himself and then went back inside. I was a bit terrified for a while, afraid to go back to the fence, but when I did, I noticed not more quotes but two words in entirely different handwriting had been added, "Thank you."

Later, I saw the old man in his front yard. He beckoned(召唤) me over and told me how my quotes had been inspiring him, how he thanked me and how he was glad to see young people still have "values". We are now good friends and I talk to him a lot. This experience has changed my life. I still don't know who wrote that very first quote, but if he is out there, I'd like to say "thanks" to that unknown friend.

- Why did the writer begin to write a quote on the fence?
A. He wanted to practice his handwriting.
B. He had gotten some help from the quote.
C. He thought doing this was interesting.
D. He wanted to draw his neighbor's attention.
- Why was the writer afraid when he found that his neighbor had seen him?
A. He had thought that the old man was a mad person.
B. He had once been told that the old man was cold-hearted.
C. He thought the old man would scold him for what he had done.
D. He thought the old man would tell his parents about his action.
- Before reading the quotes on his fence the old man _____.
A. was very happy B. did not mind it
C. was a bit angry D. was very sad
- Who must have added "Thank you." to the fence?
A. The old man.
B. Someone else.
C. The writer himself.

A. writing quotes on fences is a good idea
B. the writer has written three quotes on the fence

From 17 to 23 June it's Bike to School Week! This special week has been held since 2004 for the purpose of encouraging children to travel to school on their bikes. Did you know that as little as 15 minutes of activity a day can cut in half a child's risk of becoming obese(肥胖的)?

Not only will cycling start a new exercise routine, it will also decrease busy traffic on the school roads. Don't forget how much it will help the environment! So how can you get involved? Start off by reading the Pedal Pack—it's full of ideas to help you plan your own event. The bike breakfast is a great idea because pupils will need fuel for their bodies in the mornings—both for the school day and the bike journey!

And remember to make other kids feel involved throughout the planning stage and in the event itself. Ask them to put up posters before the event and then reward them with certificates(荣誉证书) later on!

There are lots of benefits to be gained by cycling to school—But before you start there are some important tips to consider. Firstly, make sure that your bike is in good working order; check the tires, lights etc before you start a week of cycling to school. My teenage son Karl became withdrawn after his father died. As a single parent, I tried to do my best to talk to him, but the more I tried, the more he pulled away. When his report card arrived during his junior year, it said that he had been absent 95 times from classes and had six failing grades for the year. At this rate he would never graduate. I sent him to the school adviser, and I even begged him. Nothing worked.

One night I felt so powerless that I got down on my knees and pleaded for help. "Please God, I can't do anything more for my son. I'm at the end of my rope. I'm giving the whole thing up to you." I was at work when I got a phone call. A man introduced himself as the headmaster, "I want to talk to you about Karl's absences." Before he could say another word, I choked up and all my disappointment and sadness over Karl came pouring out into the ears of this stranger. "I love my son but I just don't know what to do. I've tried everything to get Karl to go back to school and nothing has worked. It's out of my hands."

For a moment there was silence on the other end of the line. The headmaster seriously said, "Thank you for your time" and hung up.

Karl's next report card showed a marked improvement in his grades. Finally, he even made the honor roll. In his fourth year, I attended a parent-teacher meeting with Karl. I noticed that his teachers were astonished at the way he had turned himself around. On our way home, he said, "Mum, remember that call from the headmaster last year?" I nodded. "That was me. I thought I'd played a joke but when I heard what you said, it really hit me how much I was hurting you.

That's when I knew I had to make you proud."
