Preface

The Major of Composition & Compositional Theories offered by the Department of Composition in Sichuan Conservatory of Music is a specialized and professional national and provincial course. Over the years, the Department has been responsible for training professional musicians and musicologists from all over China, especially the southwest of China. Since 1953 generations of our teachers have enhanced the reputation of the department by creating many musical works of national importance and completed numerous research projects that were commissioned by Sichuan Province and the Ministry of Education Department. We have published many academic monographs and theses and successfully devised and taught various subjects and carried out numerous academic researches and personnel trainings.

This collection of books is named the “Series of Books in Composition and Compositional Theories of Sichuan Conservatory of Music”, which is significant in musical composition and was sponsored by the “Central Government Specialized Fund for Regional Senior Educational Developments” (2013-2015). There are nine books published in this series, which are divided into two main parts: 1. music composition and research in compositional theories, and 2. the project of Sichuan provincial social science research base and southwest music research center-“Su Feng·Chinese contemporary composers" (XNYY2015007). This series of books mainly publish a collection of new compositions, which were written by our staffs, that have received international and national awards, been performed at international music festivals, or otherwise received acclaim as research successes in musical composition.

Being dedicated to musical education and the development of musical culture based in southwest China has always been at the core of our teachers' and students' belief. We believe this collection entitled "Series of Books in Composition and Compositional Theories of Sichuan Conservatory of Music" will be a useful guide for academic teaching in various musical fields. Moreover, we hope that the high quality compositions in this collection of books will stimulate further academic developments in the field of composition and compositional theories at a nationwide level.

Introduction

The Auspicious Sunshine (ZHA XI BI NI MA)

For Chorus and Percussion (2010)

Lyrics:

Moonlight speckles the prairie, And the prairie looks peaceful and quiet, The Ganglamedo is singing Kissingly.

Sun shines above the mother earth, And she looks fantastic, We are singing and dancing in extremely happy mood for our fair homeland.

We get together and drink a toast for our full-filling life, We are grateful to the heaven, the earth and the sunshine, We wish there would be happiness and blessedness on our earth forever.

About the Lyrics:

For sustaining this piece surrounded in the atmosphere of Tibetan style, the composer adopted Chinese phonetic alphabet to sing the content of lyrics. Among of those, la suo, o la suo ye, la ni xi mo, wa ruola ni la ya etc. belong to the padding syllable normally used in Tibetan music, the others as ga ka, ba pa ba ma, da ta da na belong to phonetic alphabet of Tibetan characters, which also have the cultural meanings except the function of padding syllable.
