When Mr. Ray warned everyone about the undertow, that word seemed to tug at something inside Dory, too. “I’ve heard that before...” she said to herself.

As the stingrays passed, Dory watched in awe. Mesmerized, she began to drift closer and closer.

The strength of the current sucked Dory into the undertow! Then a memory of her parents flashed into her mind before she passed out.

When she awoke, Dory strained to recall the memory. Dory and the rest of the class swam back to Mr. Ray's classroom, where Marlin was waiting. He asked Dory what she had remembered.

"Ugh...I'm not sure anymore," said Dory. Then Nemo said he had heard her murmur, "The Jewel of Morro Bay, California."
