The lights in the movie theater dimmed, and the film started to roll. Young Carl Fredricksen gazed up at the screen in awe. There, larger than life, was his idol—Charles Muntz, the world-famous explorer.

The newsreel showed Muntz boarding his custom-made dirigible, the Spirit of Adventure, accompanied by his trusty dogs. They were off to South America to capture a creature known as the “Monster of Paradise Falls.”

“Adventure is out there!” Muntz declared.

When Carl grew up, he wanted to be an adventurer just like Charles Muntz!

That afternoon, Carl pretended a balloon was his airship and imagined that he was Charles Muntz on a daring expedition. While he was playing, he heard someone exclaim, "Adventure is out there!"

Carl stopped in his tracks. That was exactly what Muntz always said! The voice seemed to have come from inside an old, empty house.

Carl went into the house to investigate. A girl named Ellie was flying her own make-believe airship!

“Don’t you know that this is an exclusive club?” Ellie cried when she saw Carl. “Only explorers get in here!”

But Ellie quickly realized that Carl was an explorer, too. She fastened a pin made from a grape-soda bottle cap to his shirt. “You and me, we’re in a club now,” she told him.

“When I get big, I’m going where Charles Muntz is going—South America. I’m gonna move my clubhouse there and park it right next to the falls.” Ellie pointed to a picture she had drawn of her clubhouse beside Paradise Falls.

Then she flipped to a page marked STUFF I'M GOING TO DO. The pages after that were blank. "I'm saving these for all the adventures I'm gonna have," she told Carl.

Ellie made Carl promise to take them to Paradise Falls someday. "Swear you'll take us. Cross your heart!" she ordered.

Carl did. He thought Ellie was quite a girl.
