the first of these is the Commission's investigation of the alleged activities of the Communist Party in the United States.

The Commission was organized by the House of Representatives in 1950, and its first report was published in 1951. The Commission's findings were based on the testimony of a large number of witnesses, including many who had been members of the Communist Party. The Commission's report was a landmark document in the history of the Cold War, and it led to the passage of the McCarran Internal Security Act of 1950.
