Part II Reading Comprehension (35 minutes)

Directions: There are 4 reading passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions of unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked a,b,c and d. You should decide on the best choice and blacken the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a pencil.

Questions 21 to 25 are based on the following passage:

In the house where I grew up, it was our custom to leave the front door on the latch at night. I don't know if that was a local term or if it is universal; "on the latch" meant the door was closed but not locked. None of us carried keys; the last one in for the evening would close up, and that was it.

Those days are over. In rural areas as well as in cities, doors do not stay unlocked, even for part of an evening.

Suburbs and country areas are, in many ways, even more vulnerable than well-patroled urban streets. Statistics show the crime rate rising more dramatically in those allegedly tranquil areas than in cities. At any rate, the era of leaving the front door on the latch is over.

It has been replaced by dead-bolt locks, security chains, electronic alarm systems and trip wires hooked up to a police station or private guard firms. Many suburban families having sliding doors on their patios (平台), with steel bars elegantly built in so no one can pry(撬开) the doors open.

It is not uncommon, in the most pleasant of homes, to see pasted on windows decals(贴花纸) announcing that the premises are under surveillance by this security force or that guard company.

The lock is the new symbol of America. Indeed, a recent public-service advertisement by a large insurance company featured not actuarial charts but a picture of a child's bicycle with the nowusual padlock attached to it.

The ad pointed out that, yes, it is the insurance companies that pay for stolen goods, but who is going to pay for what the new atmosphere of distrust and fear is doing to our way of life? Who is going to make the psychic payment for the transformation of America from the Land of the Free to the Land of the Lock?

- 21. The term "on the latch" as used by the author means most nearly
  - a. fastened with dead-bolt locks
  - b. leaving the door open

c. not locked d. locked with electronic alarm system 22. The surburbs are easily attacked by criminals because a. the doors of the houses in the surburbs are not locked b. there are more criminals in the surburbs than in the cities c. the people living in the surburbs are more careless d. there are less policemen on foot in the surburbs 23. People use many kinds of safeguards. Which of the following is not true a. people use regular keyed locks. b. The warning apparatus is used. c. Private detectives from insurance company are hired. d. Sliding glass doors are installed in the country families. 24. Insurance companies pay for the loss of personal property, but people stil worry, it is because a. insurance companies can not pay the psychic harm b. insurance companies usually pay less c. people have to go through a lot of paper work d. people do not believe what insurance companies say 25. The title that best expresses the theme of this passage is ______ a. The Land of Free to the Land of Lock b. Lock, the new symbol of America

Questions 26 to 30 are based on the following passage:

c. The Era of "On the Latch" is Over d. The Development of America's Safety

Many private institutions of higher education around the country are it danger. Not all will be saved, and perhaps not all deserve to be saved. Ther are low-quality schools just as there are low-quality business. We have n obligation to save them simply because they exist.

But many thriving institutions that deserve to continue are threatened They are doing a fine job educationally, but they are caught in a financia squeeze(拮据), with no way to reduce rising costs or increase revenues (收入 significantly. Raising tuition doesn't bring in more revenue, for each tim tuition goes up, the enrollment goes down, or the amount that must be give away in student aid goes up. Schools are bad businesses, whether public o private, not usually because of mismanagement but because of the nature of the enterprise. They lose money on every customer, and they can go bankrup either from too few students or too many students. Even a very good colleg is a very bad business.

It is such colleges, thriving but threatened, I worry about. Low enrollment is not their chief problem. Even with full enrollments, they may go under. Efforts to save them, and preferably to keep them private, are a national necessity. There is no basis for arguing that private schools are inherently better than public schools. Examples to the contrary abound. Anyone can name state universities and colleges that rank as the finest in the nation and the world. It is now inevitable that public institutions will be dominant, and therefore diversity is a national necessity. Diversity in the way we support schools tends to give us a healthy diversity in the forms of education. In an imperfect society such as ours, uniformity of education throughout the nation could be dangerous. In an imperfect society, diversity is a positive good. Ardent supporters of public higher education know the importance of sustaining private higher education.

- 26. According to the author's opinion schools are bad business because of_____.
  - a. mismanagement
  - b. too few students
  - c. too many students
  - d. the nature of school
- 27. The author used the phrase "go under" in the third paragraph to mean

a. "get into difficulties"

b. "have low enrollment"

c. "have low tuition"

d. "bring in more money"

<sup>28.</sup> We can reasonally conclude from this passage that the author made an appeal to the public in order to support____.

a. public institutions

b. private schools

c. uniformity of education

d. diversity of education

a. High-quality private schools deserve to be saved.

b. If the tuition is raised, the enrollment goes down.

c. There are many cases to show that public schools are better than private schools.

d. Private schools have more money than public schools.

<sup>30.</sup> Which of the following ways could possibly save private schools?

a. Raising tuition.

- b. Full enrollment.
- c. National awareness and support.
- d. Reduction of rising costs.

Questions 31 to 35 are based on the following passage:

It is a war against all nations. American ships have been sunk, American lives taken, in ways which it has stirred us very deeply to learn about but the ships and people of other neutral and friendly nations have been sunk and overwhelmed in the waters in the same way. There has been no discrimination. The challenge is to all mankind. Each nation must decide for itself how it will meet it. The choice we make for ourselves must be made with a moderation (适度) of counsel and a temperateness of judgement befitting our character and our motives as a nation. We must put excited feeling away. Our motives will not be revenge or the victorious assertion of the physical might of the nation, but only the vindication (辩护) of right, of human right, of which we are only a single champion.

When I addressed the Congress on the twenty-sixth of February last I thought that it would suffice to assert our neutral rights with arms, our right to use the seas against unlawful interference, our right to keep our people safe against unlawful violence. But armed neutrality, it now appears, is impracticable. Because submarines are in effect outlaws when used as the German submarines have been used against merchant shipping, it is impossible to defend ships against their attacks as the law of nations has assumed that merchantmen would defend themselves against privateers(私掠船) or cruisers (巡洋舰), visible craft giving chase upon the open sea. It is common prudence in such circumstances, grim necessity indeed, to endeavor to destroy them before they have shown their own intention. They must be dealt with upon sight, if dealt with at all. The German government denies the right of neutrals to use arms at all within the areas of the sea which it has proscribed (剥夺), even in the defense of rights which no modern publicist has ever before questioned their right to defend. The intimation(暗示) is conveyed that the armed guards which we have placed on our merchant ships will be treated as beyond the pale (范围) of law and subject to be dealt with as pirates(海盗)would be. Armed neutrality is ineffectual enough at best; in such circumstances and in the face of such pretensions it is worse than ineffectual: it is likely only to produce what it was meant to prevent; it is practically certain to draw us into the war without either the rights or the effectiveness of belligerent(交战国). There is one choice we can't make, we are incapable of making: we will not choose the path of submission and suffer the most sacred rights of our nation and our people to be ignored or violated. The wrongs against which we now array ourselves are no common wrongs; they cut to the very roots of human life.

With a profound sense of the solemn and even tragical character of the step I am taking and of the grave responsibilities which it involves, but in unhesitating obedience to what I deem my constitutional duty, I advise that the Congress declare the recent course of the imperial German government to be in fact nothing less than was against the government and people of the United States; that if formally accept the status of belligerent which has thus been thrust upon it; and that it take immediate steps to put the country in a more thorough state of defense.

Questions 36 to 40 are based on the following passage:

In large part as a consequence of the feminist movement, historians have focused a great deal of attention in recent years on determining more accurately the status of women in various periods. Although much has been accomplished for the modern period, premodern cultures have proved more difficult: sources are restricted in number, fragmentary, difficult to interpret, and often contradictory. Thus it is not surprising that some earlier scholarship concerning such cultures has so far gone unchallenged. An example is Johann Bachofen's 1861 treatise on Amazons, women-ruled societies of questionable existence contemporary with ancient Greece.

Bachofen argued that women were dominant it many ancient societies. His work was based on a comprehensive survey of references in the ancient sources to Amazonian and other societies—societies in which descent and property rights are traced through the female line. Some support for his theory can be found in evidence such as that drawn from Herodotus, the Greek "historian" of the fifth century B.C., who speaks of an Amazonian society, where the women hunted and fought in wars. A woman in this society was not allowed to marry until she had killed a person in battle.

Nevertheless, the assumption that the first recorders of ancient myths have preserved facts is doubtable. If one begins by examining why ancients refer to Amazons, it becomes clear that ancient Greek descriptions of such societies were meant not so much to represent observed historical fact-real Amazonian societies—but rather to offer "moral lessons" on the supposed outcome of women's rule in their own society. Thus I would argue, the purpose of accounts of the Amazons for their male Greek recorders was to teach both male and female Greeks that all-female groups, formed by withdrawal from tradtional society, are destructive and dangerous.

- 36. Bachofen's theory still dominates because _____ a. reliable information about the ancient world is difficult to acquire b. ancient societies show the best evidence of woman in positions of power c. feminists have shown little interest in ancient societies d. Bachofen's knowledge of Amazonian culture is unparalleled 37. All of the following are stated by the author as problems conected with the sources for knowledge of premodern cultures except ______. a. partial completeness b. restricated accessibility c. difficulty of interpretation d. tendency toward contradiction 38.
