Soon it was Spring. The sun warmed up the ground. It was time for the bird to go. He asked Tiny to come with him. She could sit on his back and they would fly to the woods. But Tiny knew it would make the mouse sad if she left.* The mouse had been so kind to let her stay. She could not hurt her. "I cannot go with you," she said.

"Goodbye, then. Thank you for saving my life." And the bird flew out into the sunshine.

Tiny began to cry. She liked the bird very much. She knew she was going to miss him. She also wanted to go out into the warm sunshine. But she was not allowed.

"You are going to get married, Tiny," said the mouse. "Aren't you lucky that the mole wants you to be his wife?!* Now we will get some clothes ready for your wedding."

Thumbelina: Chapter 6 Wedding Preparations

Tiny did not feel lucky. She did not want to marry the mole. He visited every day. He talked about how much he disliked the summer. He could not wait for it to be over.* When the summer was over, he decided they would have their wedding.

Each morning and each evening, Tiny would look outside. She dreamed of going out and enjoying the warmth.* She dreamed of seeing the green trees and the flowers. She dreamed of hearing the birds sing again. And she missed her friend, the bird.

Autumn arrived, and the mouse talked about the wedding, “Your dress is ready. You will be married in four weeks.”

Tiny cried and cried, “I don’t want to marry the mole!”

“Nonsense,” the mouse told her. “He is a very handsome mole. He has lots of beautiful clothes. And he has lots of food saved for the winter.* You should be thankful.”
