The American School System

美国是现代文明高度发达的国家, 在许多方面居世界领先地位。美国的强大和进步不是偶然的, 一个重要的因素就是其教育的进步以及教育体制的完善。美国学生通常从一年级上到十二年级, 作息时间与中国基本一致, 只是下午放学较早。超过四千六百万美国儿童上的是公立学校, 其资金来自州政府, 在公立学校实行的是免费教育。大约有六百万儿童在私立学校接受教育, 大多数私立学校没有来自政府的资金援助, 因此学生的父母要交付大笔的学费。还有一百万以上的儿童根本不去学校, 而是由父母在家里进行教育, 这种教育方式在过去的十五年间变得越来越流行。

文化点滴

The education system in the United States is controlled by state and local governments. The federal government has no power to establish a national educational system. Federal agencies do not make education policy. These decisions are made at the state or local levels.

So you might expect education laws to be different in each state. But they are similar. For example, in all fifty states and six territories (准州), all children must attend school from the age of six or seven to the age of sixteen. Public schools are free of charge for grades one through twelve. The schools receive money from the state government.

Private schools (私立学校) also operate in all states and territories. Some private schools are operated by churches and religious groups. Other private schools are not linked to any religious organization. Private schools must be approved by the state in which they operate. Most private schools do not receive government money. The parents of private school students pay the school.

American students generally attend school from the first through the twelfth grades. Students are in school from Monday through Friday. They attend classes from about eight in the morning until three in the afternoon.

The school year usually begins in September and continues until June. Most states require a school year of one-hundred-eighty days. Some schools have changed this schedule and require students to attend school throughout the year.

More than forty-six-million students attend American public schools. Another six-million attend private schools. More than one-million students do not go to school at all. Their parents teach them at home. This home-schooling has become popular in the last fifteen years or so.

In New York, there is now a school with no daily lessons, no class teachers, not even a school building. The “school” is a project. It is called “City-as-School” and the name means just that, the city itself is the place where 350 students, between the age of 15 and 18, learn their lessons.

Students choose areas of work which interest them and then they help to do that work. For instance, one girl spends her week in the offices of a Congresswoman—an elected official—helping the public with problems such as pensions (养老金), housing, etc. Then she goes to help in a theatre for a day and she spends one day a week taking first-year courses at college.

City-as-School is 30 years old. The education system in New York accepts it now, as an alternative to final years at school. But can it replace ordinary lessons? Well, students have to pass maths and science exams before they enter the “school”. These subjects are not easy to provide for in “City-as-School”. Teachers monitor the progress of the students. 80 to 85% of the students go to college (or university, as it is called in Britain) after their time at “City-as-School”. The success rate is high. And the students are enthusiastic about their “school”. They like the responsibility of their work, and the sense of purpose it gives them.

When the students leave “City-as-School”, they don’t have a normal academic education, but they do know a lot about different kinds of work in the city!

1. “City-as-School” is special because it is _____.

- A. in New York, one of the most famous cities in the world
- B. not a common school we usually see and know
- C. a school having special students
- D. free of charge for the citizens

2. Which of the following is NOT included in the permission of entering the “school”?

- A. Between 15 and 18 years old.
- B. Passing maths and science exams.
- C. Finishing first-year courses at college.
- D. Students being in their final years at school.

3. What do the teachers at “City-as-School” do?

- A. To monitor the progress of the students.
- B. To give lessons to the students.
- C. To evaluate the students’ performance.
- D. To protect the students.

4. What is the author’s attitude to “City-as-School”?

- A. Agreeable.
- B. Indifferent.
- C. Neutral (中立的).
- D. Disagreeable.

To most of us, school means classes, teachers, schedules, grades, and tests. But for the children at Sudbury Valley School in Massachusetts, school is very different.

Firstly, there are no lessons. All the children, aged between 4 and 19, do whatever they want. There are no teachers, only “staff members”. The idea behind this is that you do not need to make children learn, because children want to learn anyway. “You do not need to say to a three-year-old, ‘Go explore your environment.’ You can’t stop them!” says Daniel Greenberg, a founder of the school. “But if you make children do what you want all day, they will lose all taste for learning.”

At Sudbury Valley School, you will permit children to talk, read, paint, cook, work on computers, study French, play the piano, climb trees, or just run around. Two boys spent three years just fishing!

The other way that Sudbury Valley School is different is that the children can decide the rules. Every week, there is a school meeting where both children and staff have one vote each—even the four-year-olds. They decide the school rules, how to spend the school budget, and even which staff they want and do not want anymore.

When the school first opened in 1968, people said it would never work. But today, the school has 200 students, and 80% of its students go on to college. Even the two boys who went fishing all the time have successful careers today. One of them is a musician and the other is a computer scientist.

What to do if you don't feel popular?

- Try to take part in activities. Call your friends. Plan to do something. The worst feeling is staying home alone, because it makes you feel even more lonely.
- Try to make new friends. Choose friends carefully, not just because you think they're popular. And remember, making good friends takes time. Choosing a popular person to be friends with is okay. If they are nice.
- Be yourself. If you want to become friends with someone who's popular, don't make yourself into someone you are not just to impress that person.
- Be nice. Be friendly. Be outgoing (开朗的). But don't overdo it! Talk to trusted friends if you are feeling really bad. Or you might want to write it down in a journal or diary.
- Do something special for yourself. You could take pictures of your friends, or collect their school pictures, and take a collage (拼贴画) to hang on your wall. This will remind you, when you are feeling unpopular, that you really do have friends.
- Think up your own ideas. These suggestions might not work for everyone.

What to do if you have a problem with your teacher?

- Talk to your parents, or another adult who will listen to you and perhaps can help. Talk to your friends. Maybe they have had problems with the same teacher, too.
- Don't give the teacher a reason to have problems with you. Do your work, complete your task, attend the class seriously and take notes. Maybe you just need to give the teacher a chance.
- Try to find out what the problem is.
- Talk to the teacher if you feel comfortable doing this. Don't be nasty (闹别扭的), but express your concerns. Listen to the teacher, as well.
- Just accept the fact that you're not going to love all your teachers.

1. What do we mean by saying "not feeling popular"?

- A. Not liked by our classmates or workmates. B. Not doing what we want.
C. Not showing any interest in anything. D. Not so happy.

As the mobile phones so widely appear in our daily life, someone said it would be cool if you didn't have a mobile phone nowadays. It might be true to some extent, but as for an adult, mobile means contact. It connects your work, relatives, friends etc. It should do great deeds for us.

Months ago, my uncle gave his dear son a handphone, because my nephew's school is far from his home. He can only come back once a term, and the handphones haven't been so expensive yet.

Someone has criticized the young people for playing mobiles, but not using. They are fond of sending messages, taking pictures and so on. They buy expensive, high level and fashion types for showing. They play on the mobiles day in and day out ... Holy cow!

So, what happens to youngsters around you? Do they have a handphone? What do they use it for? Do you think it's necessary for teenagers who are still in school to have a handphone?

POSTER 1:

In my view, mobile phones are only a tool for communication purpose, just like any other tools which have the potential to be abused and misused. Personally, I can see young people using it for security reason, emergency purpose, etc. If the parents can afford paying big phone bills for their kids, well, that's their business, like the old saying goes "Live and let live."

POSTER 2:

From psychological perspective, teenagers are more likely to be relaxed or pleasure-oriented. They would like to make something different. Purchasing brands that are considered "COOL" is important to them. They want others to like and admire themselves, and sometimes, even exaggerate (夸大) their own personality to show off. This can be seen as a kind of psychology during this certain range of age.

Currently, people should tend to be more sociable, and age should not be seen as a barrier for teenagers to own their phones. They also need to set trends on the social circuit. But, here parents should play important role in controlling their children about how to use the phones more properly.

- The first sentence of the passage means that _____.
 - people admire those who don't have mobile phones
 - people don't like to have mobile phones nowadays
 - mobile phones are too popular among people now
 - mobile phones is not as useful as before
- Why are some teenagers criticized according to the third paragraph?
 - They use mobile phones for playing instead of using.
 - They don't use mobile phones for their study.
 - They play "Holy Cow" games in mobile phones.
 - They buy expensive, fashionable mobile phones.
- The first poster uses the sentence "Live and let live." to mean _____.
 - teenagers shouldn't use mobile phones
 - parents should buy mobile phones for their children
 - teenagers can use mobiles phones if they want
 - teenagers should use mobiles phones for communication
- The attitude of the second poster towards whether teenagers really use mobile phones is _____.
 - supportive
 - objective
 - negative
 - indifferent

A proven method for effective textbook reading is the SQ3R method developed by Francis Robinson. The first is to survey (the S step) the chapter by reading the title, introduction, section headings, summary, and by studying any graphs, tables, illustrations or charts. The purpose of this step is to get an overview of the chapter so that you will know before you read what it will be about. In the second step (the Q step), for each section you ask yourself questions such as "What do I already know about this topic?" and "What do I want to know?" In this step you also take the section heading and turn it into a question. This step gives you a purpose for reading the section. The third step (the first of the 3 R's) is to read to find the answers to your questions. Then at the end of each section, before going on to the next section, you recite (the second of the 3 R's) the answers to the questions that formed in the question step. When you recite you should say the information you want to learn out loud in your own words. The fifth step is done after you have completed step 2, 3 and 4 for each section. You review (the last of the 3 R's) the entire chapter. The review is done much as the survey was in the first step. As you review, hold a mental conversation with yourself as you recite the information you selected as important to learn. The mental conversation could take the form of asking and answering the questions formed the headings or reading the summary, which lists the main ideas in the chapter, and trying to fill in the details for each main idea.

- The passage implies that the SQ3R method _____.
 - needs to be prove
 - leaves much to be desired
 - turns out to be practicable
 - cannot be used by every reader
- The SQ3R method consists of _____ steps.
 - three
 - four
 - five
 - seven
- According to the passage, the first step helps the readers _____.
 - read the first several paragraphs
 - scan the whole chapter
 - study the graphs
 - get the theme of chapter
- Which of the following is the fourth step?
 - To question yourself.
 - To read for information.
 - To utter your answers.
 - To draw a conclusion.
- Which of the following statements is true?
 - In the last step, you should remember all the information.
 - When you finish the last step, you will get both the main idea and the details.
 - The mental conversation involves answering the questions asked by the author.
 - While you are holding a mental conversation you select the important information.

What I Hate

I always listen to my friends' problems and try to give them good advice, but there are some things that just get under my skin.

My number-one annoyance is my friends who don't get along with their parents. Left and right I hear "I hate my mom," "I hate my dad," "My parents are so stupid," "They don't care about me." I think they don't know what they're saying!

What kids need to understand is that regardless of whether you have a boyfriend, girlfriend, or even a best friend, your parents care about you the most. If that's hard to believe, think about this: How did you get a roof over your head, a bed to sleep in, food to eat, and most of all, a place to call home?

If that's not enough, let's continue. Look in your bedroom. Where did you get all that stuff? Your bed, the clothes in the closet, the blankets that keep you warm, or all the nonessentials. I bet most of it came from your parents.

I'm sick of hearing how your parents do "nothing" for you. They probably do more than you do for yourself. Consider that next time you start criticizing your parents, who also gave you life.

So many times I have heard friends complain about their dads. "He is so over-protective—he never lets me do anything." I simply think, at least _____. Think about kids who don't. My father died in an accident three years ago. I'd always been "daddy's girl", which makes things even harder to manage.

So, please stop before you say "I hate", especially if it's about a parent, and think about those of us who aren't lucky enough to have two caring parents.
