We never see the wind

but we can feel it.

Do you know what it is like?

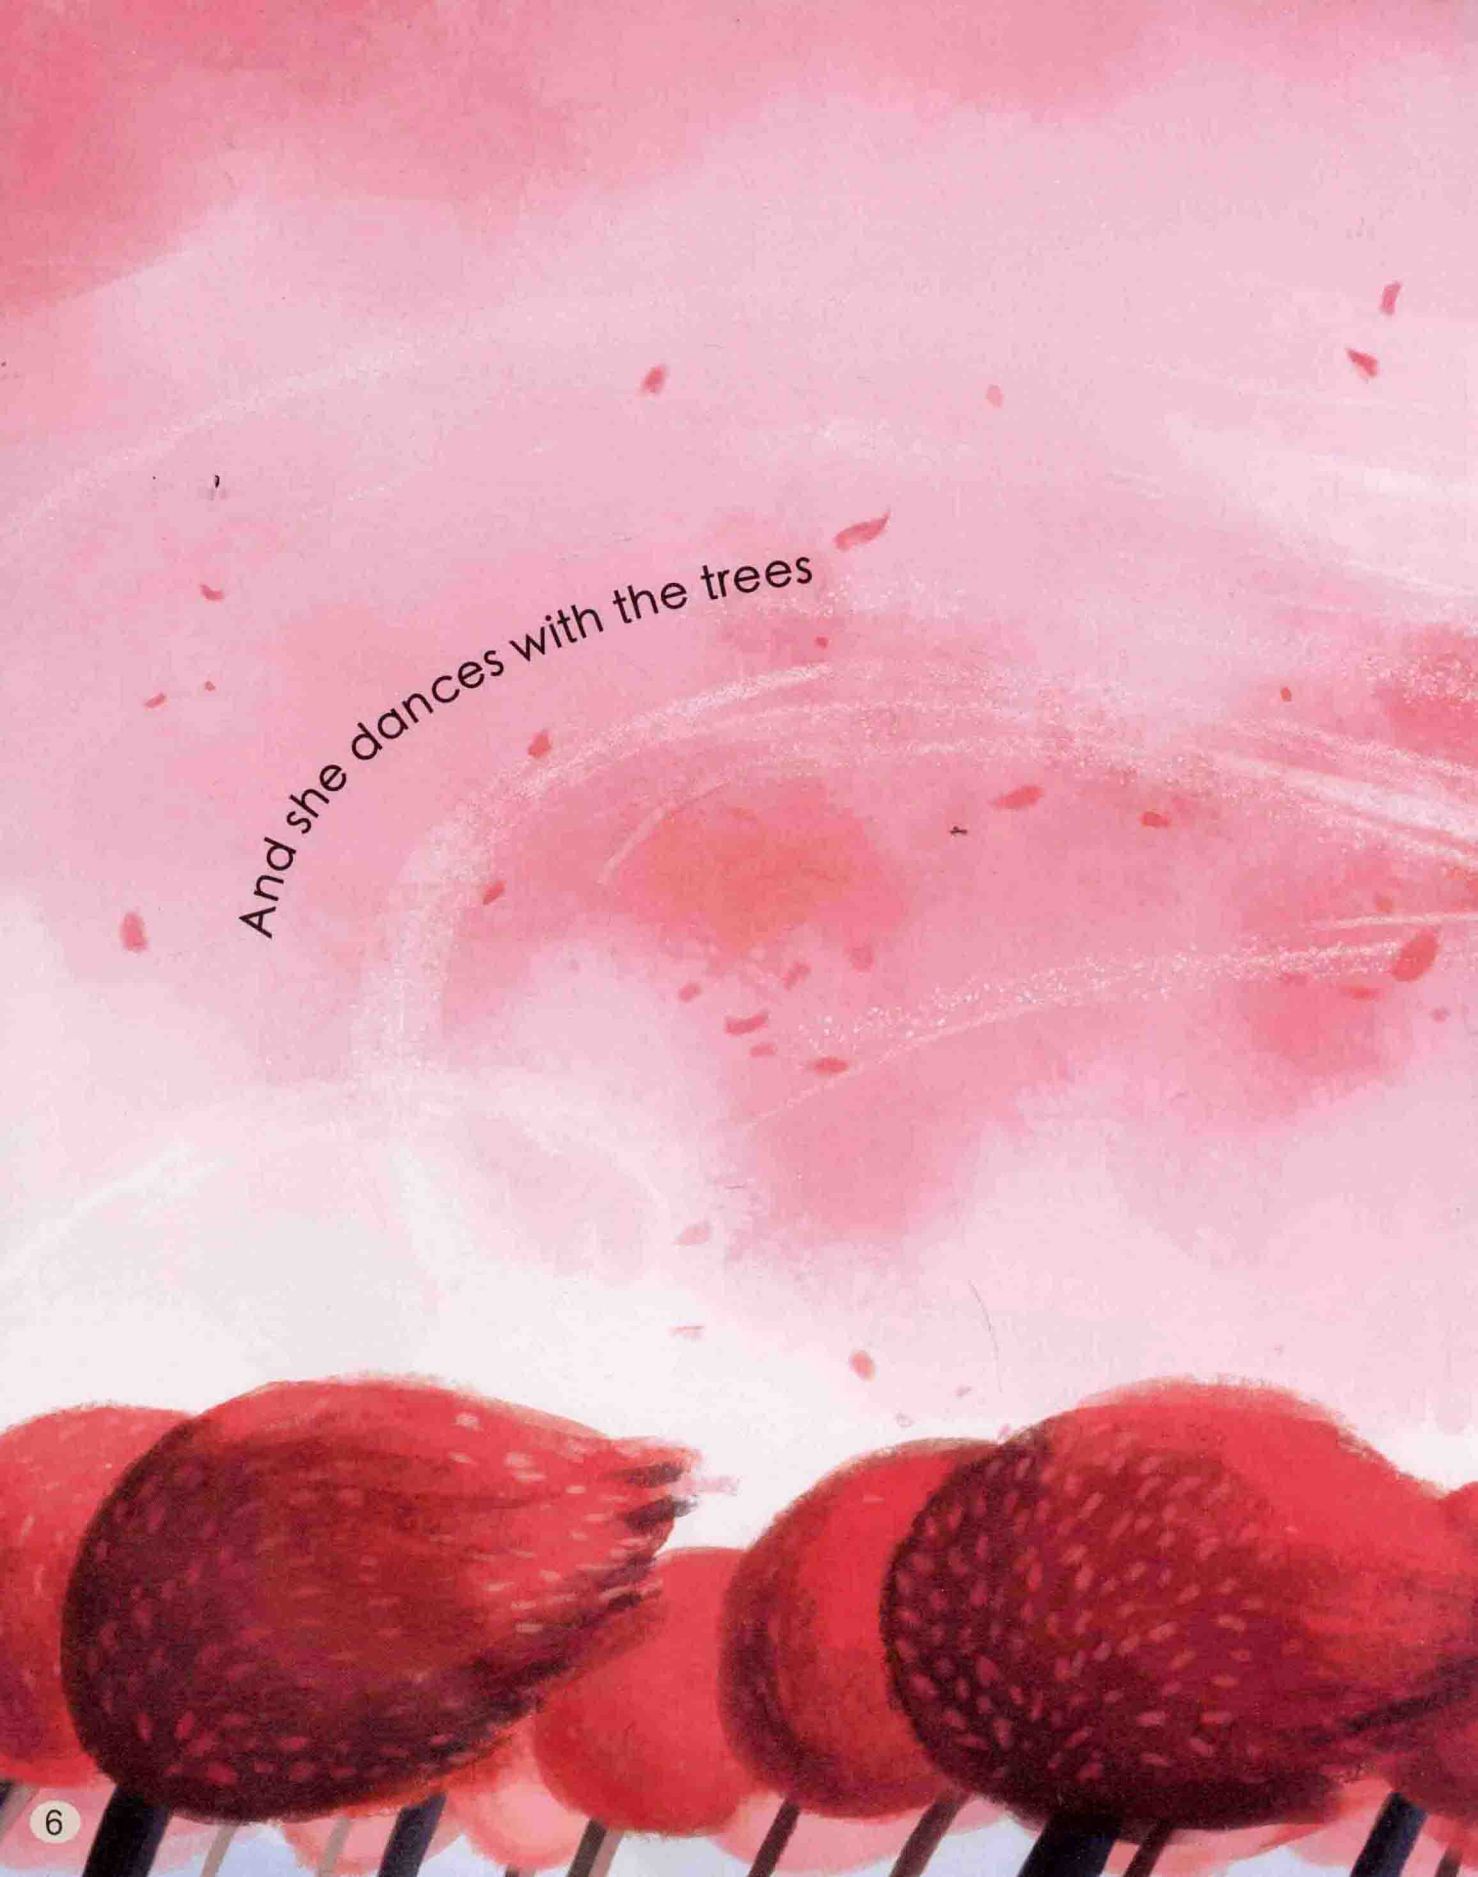

Sometimes the wind is like a happy girl.

She smiles and ripples the lake.

She laughs and sways the flowers.

And she dances with the trees and flags for hours.

Sometimes the wind is like a naughty child.

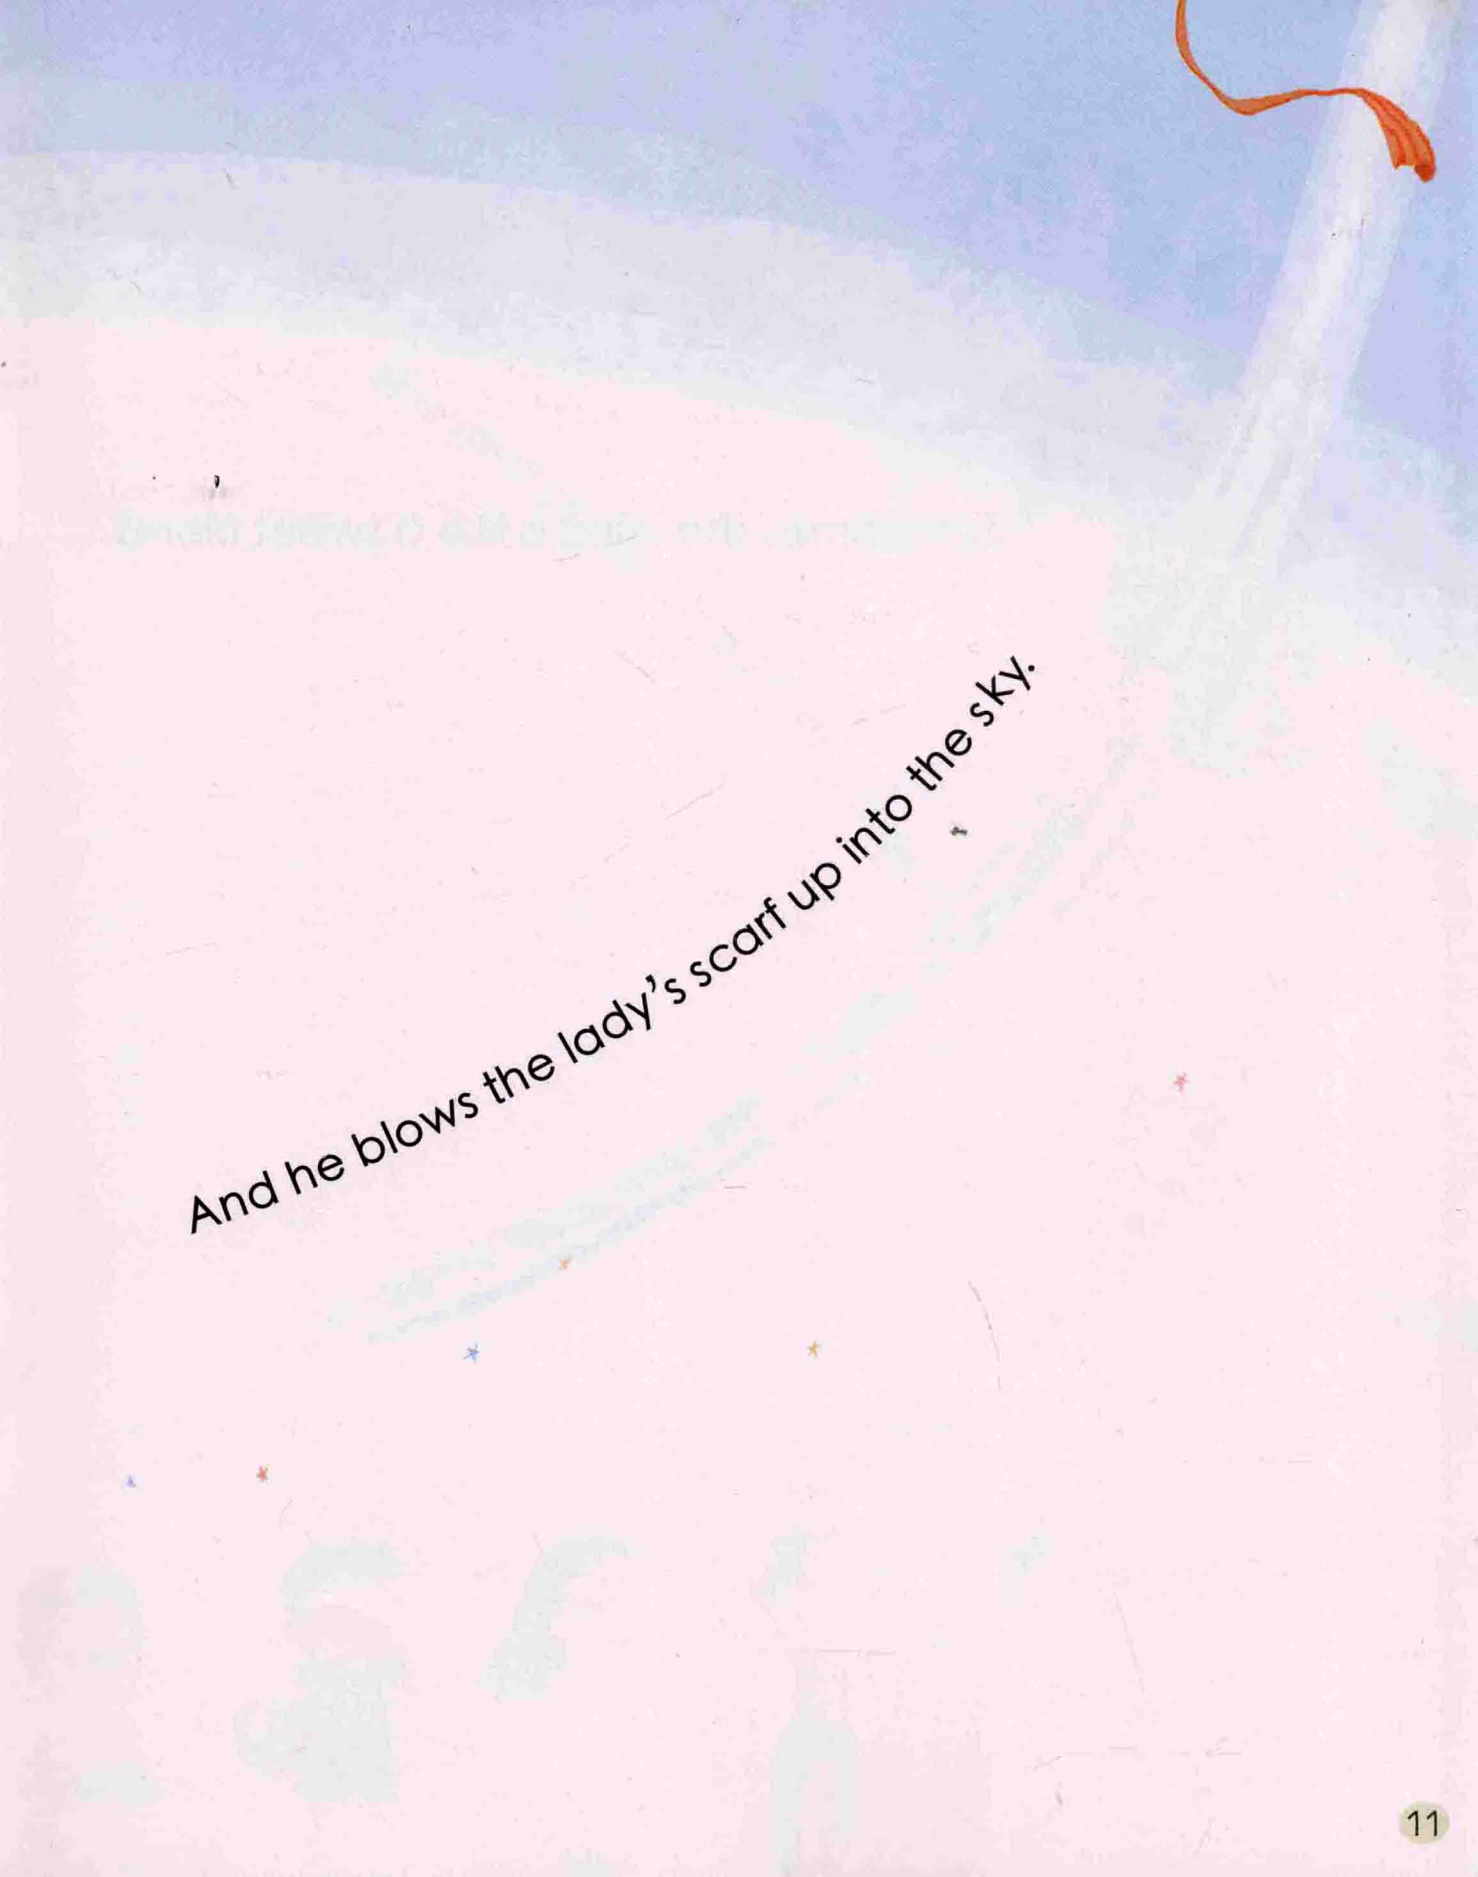

He grabs the little boy's hat and throws it on the ground

He snatches the little girl's balloons from her hand.

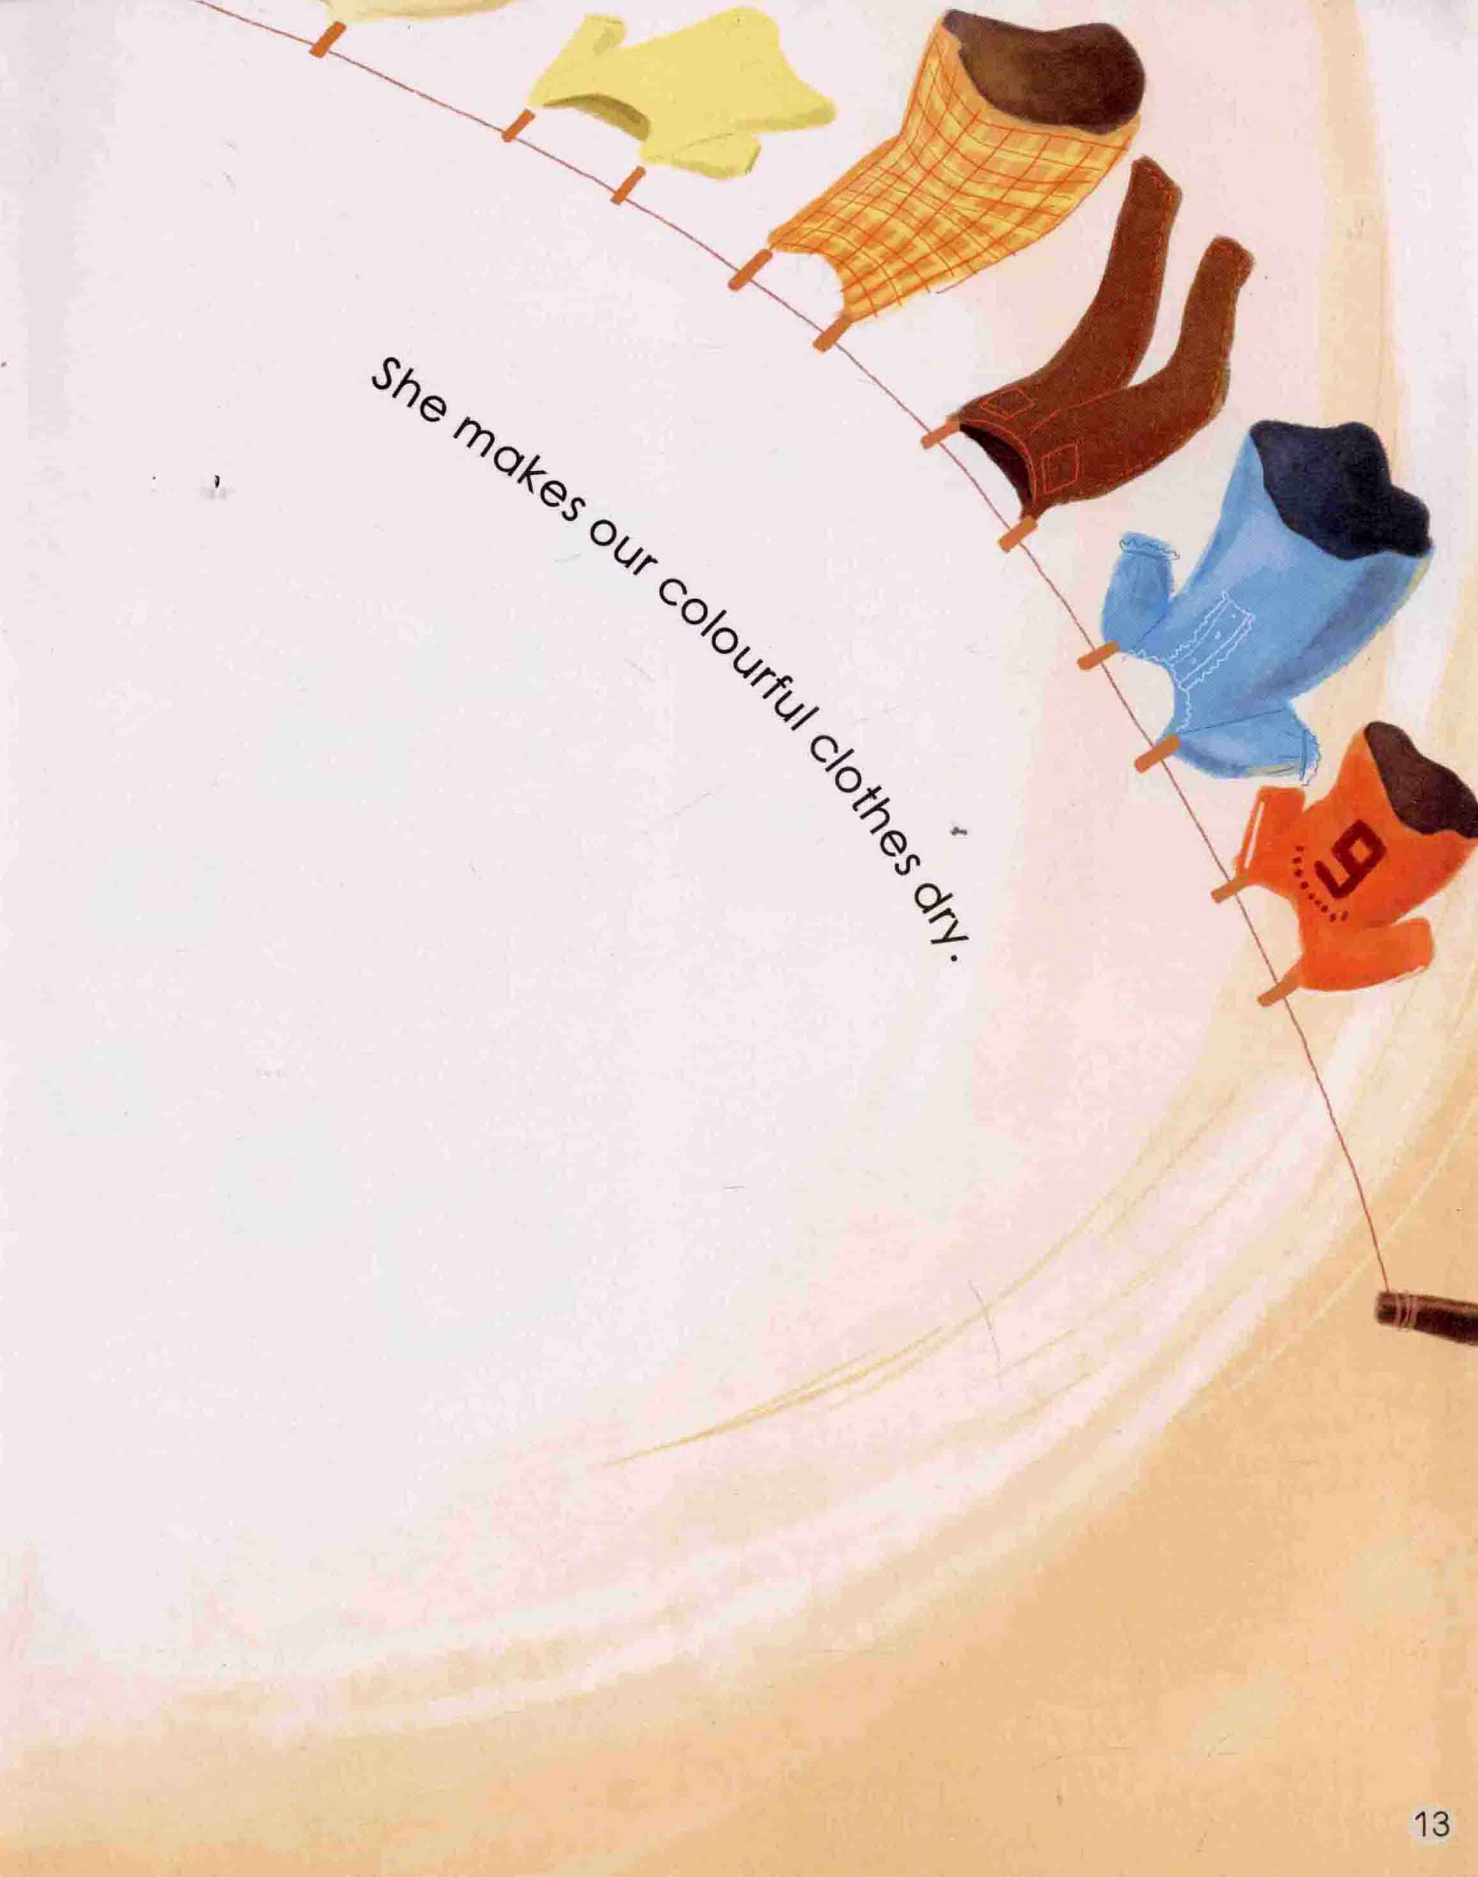

And he blows the lady's scarf up into the sky.

Sometimes the wind is like a sweet friend.

She kisses our cheeks and hands.

She makes our colourful clothes dry.

And she lets our pretty kites fly.
