

A Brief History of English Literature

(Revised Edition)

(修订本)

简明英国文学史

高继海 编著

河南大学出版社
HENAN UNIVERSITY PRESS

A Brief History of English Literature

简明英国文学史

(修订本)

高继海 编著

河南大学出版社
HENAN UNIVERSITY PRESS

· 郑州 ·

图书在版编目(CIP)数据

简明英国文学史/高继海编著. - 修订本. - 郑州:河南大学出版社,2018.8
ISBN 978-7-5649-3233-6

I. ①简… II. ①高… III. ①英语-高等学校-教材
②英国文学-文学史 IV. ①H319.39:I

中国版本图书馆 CIP 数据核字(2018)第 195541 号

责任编辑 林方丽 高平
责任校对 薛巧玲
封面设计 马龙

---

出版 河南大学出版社

地址:郑州市郑东新区商务外环中华大厦 2401 号 邮编:475001

电话:0371-86059701(营销部)

网址:www.hupress.com

排版 郑州市今日文教印制有限公司

印刷 开封智圣印务有限公司

版次 2018年8月第1版

印次 2018年8月第1次印刷

开本 787mm×1092mm 1/16

印张 20.25

字数 342千字

定价 59.00元

---

(本书如有印装质量问题,请与河南大学出版社营销部联系调换)

再版说明

目前国外有若干种英国文学简史,如阿尼克斯特、桑德斯、埃文斯、布坎、阿尔波特等人编写的英国文学简史。这些简史都很有参考价值,但不适合中国学生阅读。主要原因是,这些作者大多根据自己的个人爱好决定取舍的标准,缺乏公正性和权威性;其次,他们的论述大都建立在读者对英国文学相当熟悉的基础上,因此不适合中国的初学者使用。

国内比较权威的英国文学史当推王佐良先生主编的五卷本《英国文学史》和陈嘉先生的《英国文学史》,但这两部著作内容都过分庞杂,且王先生的文学史又是用中文撰写,不适合英语专业学习英国文学的初学者使用。刘炳善先生的《英国文学简史》多年来一直受到读者的喜爱,但这部著作的一个缺陷是对于20世纪英国文学的叙述和讨论明显不足。前不久(2002年)出版的张定铨的《新编简明英国文学史》弥补了上述著作的不足,但其缺陷也十分明显,即:1. 对于重要作品的分析过于“简明”;2. 由于打破了传统的叙述方式,使得头绪显得混乱,不便于初学者学习和记忆;3. 对20世纪作家作品的选取不够妥切。

鉴于上述情况,考虑到国内广大英语爱好者和大学英语专业的学生学习英国文学的需要,我们决定编写一部英文的《简明英国文学史》,并且编写一部《英国文学选读》与之配套,力图实现以下意图:

1. 史选结合,以史为主,以选为辅。史简单明了,突出重点,容易记忆;选都是名篇佳作,注释详细准确规范,减少理解难度。

2. 时代背景和作者生平介绍尽量简略,文学流派和重要作家的代表性作品的艺术分析尽量详尽。

3. 以时间为主线安排材料,按作家的重要程度确定其篇幅长短。

4. 全部用英文,语言力求简洁生动,通俗易懂。

5. 简史对每个作家的处理分为:a) 生平及主要作品介绍;b) 重点作品主题和艺术分析;c) 成就和影响。

6. 选读的结构安排为:a) 作者简介;b) 作品题解;c) 选文;d) 注释;e) 思考题。

7. 在作家作品的人选标准上,既尊重多数学者的共识,也显示个人的取舍特色。

《简明英国文学史》分八章。依厚今薄古的原则,16世纪之前一章,16、17、18世纪各一章,19、20世纪各二章。为方便读者,书末附年表和参考文献。

吴雪莉教授仔细审阅了书稿,提出许多修改意见,河南大学出版社的薛巧玲老师对本书的修订出版付出了大量心血,在此一并表示衷心的感谢。

限于水平,书中不当之处,欢迎读者指正。

高继海

2018年5月于河南大学

Contents

Chapter One Old and Medieval Literature .....	( 1 )
Old English Literature (450 – 1066) .....	( 1 )
Beowulf .....	( 2 )
Other Poems .....	( 3 )
Prose .....	( 5 )
Middle English Literature (1066 – 1485) .....	( 6 )
The Gawain Poet .....	( 6 )
Other Poets .....	( 9 )
Geoffrey Chaucer (1340 – 1400) .....	( 10 )
Chapter Two Renaissance and Reformation Literature .....	( 14 )
Background .....	( 14 )
Thomas More (1478 – 1535) .....	( 15 )
Sir Thomas Wyatt (1503 – 1542) and Henry Howard
The Earl of Surrey (1518 – 1547) .....	( 16 )
Sir Philip Sidney (1554 – 1586) and Walter Raleigh
(1527 – 1618) .....	( 17 )
Edmund Spenser (1552 – 1599) .....	( 19 )
Early Drama .....	( 22 )
The University Wits .....	( 24 )
Christopher Marlowe (1564 – 1593) .....	( 25 )
William Shakespeare (1564 – 1616) .....	( 27 )

Chapter Three The 17th Century .....	( 37 )
Shakespeare's Successors .....	( 37 )
Ben Jonson (1573 – 1637) .....	( 38 )
Other Playwrights .....	( 39 )
John Donne and the Metaphysical Poets .....	( 40 )
John Milton (1608 – 1674) .....	( 42 )
Prose .....	( 44 )
Francis Bacon (1561 – 1626) .....	( 44 )
The English Bible .....	( 46 )
Other Prose Writers .....	( 47 )
John Bunyan (1628 – 1688) .....	( 48 )
John Dryden (1631 – 1700) .....	( 49 )
Chapter Four The 18th Century .....	( 52 )
Prose .....	( 52 )
Jonathan Swift (1667 – 1745) .....	( 55 )
The Rise of the Novel .....	( 56 )
Daniel Defoe (1660 – 1731) .....	( 58 )
Samuel Richardson (1689 – 1761) .....	( 60 )
Henry Fielding (1707 – 1754) .....	( 61 )
Tobias Smollett (1721 – 1771) .....	( 63 )
Poetry .....	( 64 )
Alexander Pope (1688 – 1744) .....	( 64 )
Thomas Gray (1716 – 1771) .....	( 66 )
Late 18th Century Literature .....	( 68 )
Oliver Goldsmith (1730 – 1774) .....	( 68 )
Laurence Sterne (1713 – 1768) .....	( 70 )
Samuel Johnson (1709 – 1784) .....	( 70 )
Richard Sheridan (1751 – 1816) .....	( 72 )
Edward Gibbon (1737 – 1794) .....	( 73 )

---

Edmund Burke (1729 – 1797) .....	( 74 )
The Gothic Novel .....	( 74 )
Robert Burns (1759 – 1796) .....	( 75 )
Chapter Five The Age of Romanticism (1790 – 1840) .....	( 78 )
Background .....	( 78 )
Romantic Poets .....	( 84 )
William Wordsworth (1770 – 1850) .....	( 84 )
Samuel Taylor Coleridge (1772 – 1834) .....	( 86 )
George Gordon Byron (1788 – 1824) .....	( 88 )
Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792 – 1822) .....	( 91 )
John Keats (1795 – 1821) .....	( 93 )
Prose .....	( 94 )
Charles Lamb (1775 – 1834) .....	( 95 )
Thomas de Quincey (1785 – 1859) .....	( 96 )
William Hazlitt (1778 – 1830) .....	( 96 )
Robert Southey (1774 – 1843) .....	( 96 )
Leigh Hunt (1784 – 1859) .....	( 97 )
John Gibson Lockhart (1794 – 1854) .....	( 97 )
Novel .....	( 97 )
Walter Scott (1771 – 1832) .....	( 97 )
Jane Austen (1775 – 1817) .....	( 100 )
Minor Novelists .....	( 102 )
Chapter Six Victorian Literature (1837 – 1901) .....	( 104 )
Poetry .....	( 104 )
Alfred Tennyson (1809 – 1892) .....	( 105 )
Robert Browning (1812 – 1889) .....	( 106 )
Other Poets .....	( 108 )
Prose .....	( 110 )
Thomas Carlyle (1795 – 1881) .....	( 111 )

Thomas Macaulay (1800 – 1859) .....	(112)
John Ruskin (1819 – 1900) .....	(113)
Walter Pater (1839 – 1894).....	(114)
Novel .....	(115)
The Brontë Sisters .....	(116)
Other Writers .....	(119)
Charles Dickens (1812 – 1870) .....	(120)
William Makepeace Thackeray (1811 – 1863).....	(124)
George Eliot (1819 – 1880).....	(127)
Anthony Trollope (1815 – 1882) .....	(128)
George Meredith (1828 – 1909) .....	(130)
Thomas Hardy (1840 – 1928) .....	(132)
Literature of the fin-de-siècle .....	(135)
Chapter Seven First Half of the 20th Century .....	(145)
Background .....	(145)
Poetry .....	(146)
Georgian Poetry and War Poetry .....	(146)
Modernist Poetry .....	(151)
William Butler Yeats (1865 – 1939) .....	(152)
Thomas Stearns Eliot (1888 – 1965) .....	(154)
Poetry of the Thirties and Forties .....	(159)
Drama .....	(162)
George Bernard Shaw (1856 – 1950).....	(162)
Irish Dramatic Renaissance .....	(164)
Novel .....	(165)
Traditional Novel .....	(165)
Modernist Novel .....	(173)
Working Class Novel in the 1930s .....	(200)
Satirical Fiction .....	(204)

---

Chapter Eight Second Half of the 20th Century .....	(215)
Drama .....	(216)
Harold Pinter (1930 - ) .....	(218)
John Osborne (1929 - 1994) .....	(219)
Arnold Wesker (1932 - ) .....	(221)
Joe Orton (1933 - 1967) .....	(224)
Other Dramatists .....	(226)
Poetry .....	(234)
Philip Larkin (1922 - 1985) .....	(235)
Ted Hughes (1930 - 1999) .....	(236)
Geoffrey Hill (1932 - ) .....	(237)
Ronald Stuart Thomas (1913 - 2000) .....	(238)
Seamus Heaney (1939 - ) .....	(239)
Other Poets .....	(240)
Novel .....	(242)
The Angry Young Men .....	(242)
Other Novelists .....	(246)
Campus Novel .....	(261)
Historical Novel .....	(263)
Regional Novel .....	(268)
Other Recent Novelists .....	(271)
Chronology .....	(283)
References .....	(305)

Chapter One

Old and Medieval Literature

Old English Literature (450—1066)

Old English literature refers to the literature in the period from 450 to 1066. The year 450 marked the coming of the Anglo-Saxons to England to settle in Wessex, while the year 1066 witnessed William Duke of Normandy conquering England. Old English derived from several West German dialects that were brought to Britain by invaders. In 55 B. C. Julius Caesar landed in Ancient Britain, but in 407 A. D., the Roman legions were withdrawn to protect Rome. The British king, faced with invasions of Picts, sent for help from the Jutes. The Jutes came and liked what they saw, and soon seized Kent. Other pagan Germanic tribes such as the Angles and the Saxons followed, driving the Celtic inhabitants into Wales, Cornwall and Scotland. The result was that a number of Anglo-Saxon kingdoms emerged, and almost inevitably, this led to military conflicts and shifts in power. In 597 A. D. St Augustine's mission arrived Kent to convert England to Christianity, but in 793 A. D. a further period of disruption was initiated, with Viking incursions that led to the sacking of monasteries. Christian missionaries taught the English to write. The English wrote down their law-codes, and later their poems. Northumbria soon produced Caedmon and Bede. Heroic poetry, of a Christian kind, was the chief legacy of Old English literature, notably Beowulf and the Elegies.

Beowulf

Sometime between the year 700 and the year 900 the epic poem Beowulf was composed. It tells the story of Beowulf, a warrior prince from Geatland in Sweden, who goes to Denmark and kills the monster Grendel that has been attacking the great hall of Heorot, built by Hrothgar, the Danish king. Grendel's mother, a water-monster, takes revenge by carrying off one of the king's noblemen, but Beowulf dives into the underwater lair in which she lives and kills her, too. Returning home, in due course Beowulf becomes king of the Geats. The poem then moves forward about fifty years. A fire-breathing dragon that burns the royal hall ravages Beowulf's kingdom. Beowulf, aided by a young warrior, Wiglaf, manages to kill the dragon, but is fatally wounded in the course of the fight. He pronounces Wiglaf his successor. The poem ends with Beowulf's burial and a premonition that the kingdom will be overthrown.

As is often the case with a literary text, however, a good deal can actually be determined from a summary alone. Structurally, Beowulf is built around three fights. Each of these involves a battle between those who live in the royal hall and a monster; the monsters, it is clear, are dangerous, unpredictable and incomprehensible forces that threaten the security and well being of those in power and the way of life they represent. When we have established this, we have detected a pattern that is specific to the Anglo-Saxon period, but which also echoes down through the whole history of English literature. Literary texts frequently deal with an idea, or an ideal of order. There is a sense of a well-run state or a settled social order, and for the individual, a feeling of existing within a secure framework; this might be the comfort provided by religious faith, the certainty associated with marriage and economic security, or perhaps just the happiness associated with being in love. In Beowulf, a sense of security is linked with the presence of the great hall as a place of refuge and shared values; it is a place for feasting and celebration, providing warmth and protection against whatever might be encountered in the darkness outside.

What we also need to recognize in our critical thinking about the text is that a poem like Beowulf, engaging as it does with contemporary concerns, does not spring from nowhere. Beowulf belongs to a tradition of heroic or epic poetry, and this tradition can indirectly be traced back to Ancient Greece and Rome, and there is something of a parallel tradition in Scandinavian culture.

An epic is a long narrative poem (there are 3182 lines in Beowulf) that operates on a grand scale and deals with the deeds of warriors and heroes. Epic poems also interlace the main narrative with myths, legends, folktales and past events; there is a composite effect, the entire culture of a country cohering in the overall experience of the poem. Beowulf can properly be called an epic poem in the sense that it celebrates the achievements of a hero in narrative verse. Although it may strike some readers as casually episodic when compared to the tighter narrative structure of Homer and Virgil, the poem is in fact constructed around three encounters with the monsters. Beowulf belongs to the category of oral, as opposed to literary, epic, in that it was composed to be recited; it was only written down much later as the poem that exists today, possibly as late as the year 1000.

Other Poems

Caedmon poems

Besides Beowulf there are other poems. First, we have the Caedmon poems. According to the historian Bede (676 – 735), who wrote Ecclesiastical History of the English People (731), Caedmon was a herdsman at Whitby while the Abbess Hilda was in office – that is, between the years 658 and 680. By means of a vision he was inspired to compose poetry of a religious nature. For a long time his poems were lost; but in 1651 a number of pieces were discovered and ascribed to him. They are poetical paraphrases of Biblical stories such as Genesis, Exodus, and Daniel. It is now believed that these poems are not those of Caedmon, but the work of several unknown compilers. Caedmon's Hymn is the earliest surviving record of oral Anglo-Saxon poetry. English is a stressed language, and the Old English verse line is a balance of two-stress phrases linked by alliteration, the linking of words by use of the same initial letter. In Old English all vowels alliterate.

Cynewulf poems

Second, we have the Cynewulf poems. Cynewulf may have lived about the year 730. We know next to nothing about Cynewulf except that a mysterious signature of his appears in three poems, Christ, Juliana, and Elene. Other poems ascribed to him are The Phoenix and The Dream of the Rood. The dreamer in the latter poem, a lord, sees at midnight a glorious cross rise to fill the sky, worshiped by all of creation. The cross is covered with gold and jewels, but at other times covered with blood. The Cross of the crucifixion was sought by knights in medieval ages, which constitutes source of many legendary and heroic stories. Other poems that we can only mention are The Battle of Brunanburgh, describing an event which took place in 937; one on the Battle of Maldon (993); and a piece on the Fight at Finnesburgh, the date of which is not known.

Bede (676—735)

Bede is one of the five early English poets whose name are known: Aldhelm, Bede, Caedmon, Alfred – two saints, a cowman and a king – and Cynewulf who signed his poems but is otherwise unknown. Bede's works survive in manuscripts across Europe and in Russia. The modern way of dating years A. D. – Anno Domini, "the Year of Our Lord", was established, if not devised, by Bede. Bede employed this system in his Ecclesiastical History of the English People, instead of dating by the regal years. His example led to its general adoption.

The most striking early English poems are the elegies, poems written in dramatic monologues whose speaker is unnamed and whose situation is implied rather than specified, complaining on the hardships of life, mourning for the death of a beloved, lamenting over a specific tragic event in the past, or over war and loss, etc. The most important elegies are The Seafarer and The Wanderer. The former is a complaint in the first person on separation and isolation while the latter conveys an idea of exile and loneliness. Both poems are elegies dwelling on death, war and loss. Both are passionate, eloquent and self-explanatory. Fate and the elements seem to conspire against the solitary human figure. They appeal to the reader because they read like dramatic soliloquies of a kind familiar from Romantic literature, in which the reader can identify with the self-expression of the speaker. Like Beowulf, The Seafarer conveys a characteristic Anglo-Saxon view of life. There is a sense of melancholy that suffuses the poem, a sense of life as difficult and subject to suffering; and that, however much one displays strength, courage and fortitude, time passes and one grows old. There is, too, a stoical resignation in the poem; the kind of response one might expect to encounter in a hard, masculine culture.

Prose

Prose of this period both in bulk and importance is inferior to the poetry. Only a few works may be mentioned here. First, King Alfred (848–900). Besides being a soldier and statesman, Alfred tried to play the part of a literary reformer. For that purpose he translated four Latin works into English, the most important being The Ecclesiastical History of the English People by Bede. He wrote careful prose. It was in his reign that the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle began, the only vernacular history from so early a period in Europe. Alfred's thoughtfulness is evident in his two famous prefaces to the Pastoral Care and the Soliloquies. His resolute and practical character was combined with a respect for wisdom and its rewards. Second, the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. This famous compilation begins with the reign of King Alfred and continues till about the year 1150. There are many gaps in the narrative, and as a literary production, it varies greatly in value, but it provides a very important link between Old and Middle English. Alfric (c. 955 – 1020) and Wulfstan (d. 1023) are two ecclesiastics who lived about the year 1000. Catholic Homilies by the former and Manual by the latter are important religious, political and legal writings. They wrote chiefly on religious subjects, and are notable as being among the latest of Old English writers.

Middle English Literature (1066—1485)

Middle English literature refers to the literature in the period from 1066 to 1485, that is, from Norman Conquest to the end of the Wars of the Roses and the accession of Henry VIII. The evolution of something new is most apparent in some of the developments in religious writing in Middle English literature. One immediate consequence of the Norman Conquest was a greater degree of control over the English Church. Under Lanfranc, appointed Archbishop of Canterbury in 1070, the church was reorganised with greater unity and discipline; essentially, the English Church was integrated into the Norman mainstream. Literature in England in this period was not just in English and Latin but in French as well, and developed in directions set largely in France. Epic and elegy gave way to Romance and lyric. English writing revived fully in English after 1360, and flowered in the reign of Richard II (1372 – 1399). At the heart of educated culture, by contrast, is Sir Gawain and the Green Knight (c. 1375).

The Gawain Poet

The Gawain poet (we do not know his identity, but it is generally assumed that he wrote three other poems, Cleanness, Patience and Pearl) was writing at the same time as Chaucer that is the late fourteenth century, but wrote in the dialect of the Northwest Midlands. The existence of a confident vernacular poem in a distinctive regional variation of English attested to the varied energy of English culture at this time. But what is also clear about Sir Gawain and the Green Knight is that it owes a very large debt to French literary culture. The poem is a romance, a form that resembles epic in that it features a hero's adventures, but at the heart of romance is the idea of the single hero on a quest. Perhaps the crucial difference between epic and romance, however, is that epic is concerned with tribal warfare (as in the Anglo-Saxon period), whereas romance stresses the importance of a chivalric code. It is a kind of mirror albeit a distorting mirror, in which a member of the court sees an exaggerated version of the trials he might have to face in life, and is also presented with a model of how he should conduct himself.

Medieval romance developed as a narrative verse form in the twelfth century France, and then spread to other parts of Europe. What was confronted with in Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, therefore, is a poem that owes everything to the impact of French literary models on England. At the same time, there is a contradictory impulse in the poem, provided in some measure by its use of an English setting and the English language. It also calls upon the myth and tradition of Arthur. Gawain is the most favoured knight at Arthur's court. Stories about Arthur can be traced back as far as the ninth century. It is, however, Geoffrey of Monmouth in his History of the Kings of Britain, written in Latin in the twelfth century, who turned Arthur into a romantic king, aided by the magic of Merlin. The Round Table made its first appearance about 1154, the Arthurian story then continued to be developed in France; so much so that, when Thomas Malory wrote Morte D'Arthur in the fifteenth century, he worked mainly from French sources and French ideas. The appeal of the Arthur story in England was that it provided a focus for discussing the state of the