二、完形填空。(30 分)

Driving in China

I have been driving cars since I reached the pedals(踏板). In Canada you 16 16 to get a driver's license. I 17 myself to be a very good driver.

I visited China 20 years ago. My wife with I was in Shanghai to give a paper at a conference. We 18 the number of bicycles on the roads and the few cars. In Canada almost each family has one car, but it was 19 that most Chinese depended on bicycles.

I 20 Shanghai and to other Chinese cities many times since then and have watched the fast changes on the roads. There are far fewer bicycles now but 21 cars. The roads are crowded, the government has been forced to limit the number of days some cars can 22 and the traffic jams are almost constant(经常的). So are the accidents. On a recent visit I saw four or five 23 within a two-week period.

To get a driver's license in Canada, you must drive, with an examiner, on real roads and in real traffic. However, in China you learn on a closed course, 24 real traffic, get a license and only then are able to drive under real roads.

Driving in Canada and driving in China 25 two different experiences. In Canada there are traffic jams but they aren't so bad. We have more traffic lights; we obey them and drivers are usually 26, allowing other cars to cut in front of them knowing it won't make much difference. In China, if you stop 27 another car cut in front of you will probably be there for a long time because once one car gets in, dozens of 28 will follow.

I would rather 29 the bus than drive my car in downtown Shanghai and Beijing. Because it's 30 and stronger than most things that might run into it.

三、阅读理解。(10分)

A friend's grandfather went to America from Eastern countries. After he was processed(移民入境检查) at Ellis Island, he went into a cafeteria(自助餐厅) in lower Manhattan to get something to eat. He sat down at an empty table and waited for a waiter to take his order.

Of course no waiter came at all. At last, a woman held a plate full of food and sat down opposite him. When she saw the old man without any food, she told him how a cafeteria worked.

"Start out at that end," she said. "Just go along the line and pick out what you want. At the other end they'll tell you how much you have to pay. After you pay for the food, you can bring it here and eat it."

"I soon knew how everything works in America," the grandfather told a friend. "Life is like a cafeteria here. You can get anything you want only if you are willing to pay the money. You can even get success, but you'll never get it if you wait for someone to bring to you. You have to get up and get it by yourself."

Oxford opened the first charity shop in 1947 and there are over 7,000 charity shops in the UK. These shops sell all kinds of things and they are very cheap.

My favorite charity shop is the Red Cross Shop. There I always find children's books, all 10 to 20 pence each. They're really cheap.

Most of the workers in charity shops are volunteers. Only the manager gets a little salary(工资). Over 90% of the things in charity shops are from kind people.

All the money the shops get goes to charity work. Charity shops raise more than 110 million pounds every year. The money is for poor and sick children, homeless and disabled people, and many others. In a charity shop you can get cheap but nice things. You might even feel special while shopping.
